Market Gambling Must and Will Stop, Says Kennedy.

Close Congress Scrutiny Faced

Confirmation Depends on His Record, Avers Fletcher.

By Robert C. Albright.

Pledged to end for all time manipulative operations in stocks, the new Federal Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday moved into position of authority over securities markets under chairmanship of a man who wants to "make good" before Congress returns.

Joseph P. Kennedy, financier who won the confidence of the President and leadership of probably the Administration's most liberal-minded commission, says he won't ask the Senate to confirm him if he hasn't "come through" by January.

His sleeves rolled up to the elbows, Kennedy sat yesterday in the paper-thin, superheated temporary quarters of the Federal Trade Commission and voiced an opposition to stock market gambling unexpected in a man who has made thousands in pool operations.

"Manipulation Must End."

From now on, market speculators must look out for themselves, Kennedy told reporters.

"Our interest is to protect the legitimate investor, not the man who comes into the market on Monday and by Thursday expects to make enough money to go on a vacation," he said

"Manipulation of the market will be a thing of the past. For too long the cards have been stacked close to the chest of those with power."

Wedding Party In Fatal Wreck

One Killed, 5 Injured as Car Splits in Half Near Waldorf, Md.

One man was killed and five injured yesterday when an auto struck a roadside culvert near Waldorf, Md., split in two, overturned, and caught fire. All were returning from a wedding.

Sylvester McCarthy, 27, of 4300 Twelfth place northeast, was killed. Three others were critically injured. They were:

Bernard Galliger, 22, of 702 Lawrence street northeast, possible fractured skull; Herbert Smith, 19, of 1026 Quincy street northeast, compound fracture of the left leg and possible internal injuries; James McGinnis, 22, of 3610 Twelfth street northeast, compound fracture left arm and possible skull fracture.

Gerald Duffy, 23, of 3507 Tenth street northeast, received a possible fractured foot and lacerations. All were rushed to Providence Hospital by passing drivers.

Bernard H. Cox, Indianhead, Md., said to be the driver, was treated for a lacerated face. Charges of driving while drunk were placed against him.

Witnesses said the car, after striking a culvert, split in half. All occupants were thrown clear.

The men were said to have attended the wedding of Mace Summers, of Washington, and Miss Carmalite Mudd, granddaughter of Dr. Samuel Mudd, at St. Peter's Catholic Church, two miles from the scene of the accident.

Marland Has Early Lead in Oklahoma

House Member Tops Field in Governor Race.

Oklahoma City, July 3 (AP).—Incomplete returns from Oklahoma City boxes and the first complete precinct to be reported in today's State primary gave E. W. Marland, House member and former oil millionaire, an edge on his 14 Democratic opponents for the nomination for Governor.

Ten Oklahoma County precincts, including eight in Oklahoma City, all incomplete, and one box in Greer County gave Marland 312 votes; Jack Walton, removed a decade ago from the Governor's office, 124; Tom Anglin, Gov. Murray's candidate, 73; Lieut. Gov. Robert Burns, 71; Attorney General J. Berry King, 69, and Gomer Smith, 33.

Relief Cuts Labor Supply In Virginia

Farmers Report Few Want Work Because of Aid and VERA Pay.

Richmond, July 3 (Spl.).—Farmers in many counties of Virginia are finding it difficult and in some instances impossible to obtain needed unskilled labor for farm work because so many of the farm hands are either being maintained by relief or are working on work relief projects at wages higher than the farmers can or want to pay.

This condition was revealed today in a survey, instituted by William A. Smith, Virginia Emergency Relief administrator, to ascertain from county supervisors whether the present relief program should be continued, modified or discontinued in the summer and early fall. Reports were received from 85 per cent of the counties.

The majority of the counties reporting asked for a modification of the relief program. Of the strictly rural counties reporting, 33 wanted modification, varying from 25 to 75 per cent; 10 wanted discontinuance and 10 wanted full continuance.

Hard to Obtain Labor.

Of the urban and industrial counties, 18 wanted modification to varied extents, 4 were for continuance and 11 were for full continuance.

Fifteen counties reported that the relief program, maintained almost wholly by VERA, was making it difficult if not impossible to obtain farm laborers. They were:

Accomac, Bedford, Charlotte, Clarke, Essex, Floyd, Gloucester, King and Queen, Augusta, Giles, Orange, Prince Edward, Rock Bridge, Rappahannock and Westmoreland.

Eleven counties reported that in some instances the relief program was "demoralizing" the persons receiving it, making them indolent. They were Charlotte, Culpeper, Franklin, Surry, Goochland, Hanover, Nansemond, Stafford, Rappahannock, Augusta and Roanoke.

Eighteen counties reported that the administrative costs of relief in their areas were too high. These counties were:

Amherst, Chesterfield, Buckingham, Clarke, Dinwiddie, King and Queen, Louisa, Bath, Montgomery Norfolk, Gloucester, Grayson, King George, Matthews, Pittsylvania, Elizabeth City, Scott and Wythe.

As an example of the high administrative costs, a supervisor from Norfolk County reported that during May administrative costs were $1,196.29, while only $231.58 was spent for relief.

Chesterfield county said it could provide for all its relief needs with the money now spent for administrative costs.

A supervisor from Carroll County said he thought the relief workers should be paid in kind, rather than money, as they spend the money for whisky.

President's Mother at Aberdeen.

U. S. Nears Trade Treaty With Cuba

Hearing Will Be Held on Pact Items July 23; Objectors Warned.

The Administration's traders last night cleared the decks for the first reciprocal agreement to be negotiated under President Roosevelt's "Yankee trading" powers.

Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr served formal notice that 30 days hence the Administration will begin negotiations for a trade agreement with Cuba.

This notice was formal compliance with the law which requires 30 days' public notice before any foreign trade agreement is concluded.

Actually, the Cuban agreement is practically completed, negotiations having been conducted here and in Havana for the last four months.

Legally, however, no agreement yet exists.

The document has not been signed by representatives of either government. The signing is expected to take place shortly after a hearing has been held at which those interested may present their views. This hearing was called for July 23, 1934. It will not be public and all statements must be made under oath.

The trading committee decided it would not disclose the nature of the agreement. Neither will it disclose what United States products are likely to be affected. Nor is it proposed to state in advance what changes are likely in tariff schedules.

Therefore, objectors will be obliged to "shoot in the dark," except that it is certain that sugar, tobacco and fruit will be among the Cuban products affected.

The committee bases its refusal to give information as to the tariff changes on the grounds that no agreement has yet been concluded and therefore there is no information to be divulged. It is believed, however, that practically all the changes have been carefully worked out.

Those proposing to offer objections to the agreement are given little encouragement in the regulations governing the hearing. These were laid down by the "committee

50 Dead in Chilean Peasants' Uprising

Revolt Stirred by Lack of Crops to Live On.

Santiago, Chile, July 3 (AP).—A revolt of peasants in southern Chile was reported today to have reached serious proportions, with about 15 rioters killed.

Other persons had been slain in attacks of the peasants on persons who refused to join their movement, which is centering around Mulchen.

A reinforcement of 200 Carabineros was rushed to Mulchen by special train today, more than doubling the force there.

Leaders of the movement charged the government has not carried out its promised colonization plan and that peasants are unable to raise sufficient crops to live on.

Pardon Frees 'Traitor' Exiled On Devil's Isle 26 Years

Paris, July 3 (AP).—Twenty-six years after he was "perpetually" exiled to Devils Island, branded a traitor to France, Charles Benjamin Ullmo returned a pardoned man and tonight was ready to "start life anew"—and to marry a fiancee he saw for the first time a few hours earlier.

Ullmo was sentenced to the outpost of the hopeless in New Guinea, condemned to spend the remainder of his life there, after being convicted of betraying his native land. He was then 26, a lieutenant in the French army and accused of treason because of an actress with whom he had become infatuated.

"Perpetual detention" was the verdict of the military tribunal investigating a famous spy case in which Ullmo became the central figure.

He was sent to Devils Island and for most of his detention lived alone in a shack along the sea. He stared moodily over the ocean, hour after hour. When the maddening loneliness drove him too hard, Ullmo gave names to the sharks which he could see dashing through the water and held detailed, one-sided conversations with them.

Eighteen months before Ullmo was pardoned, a priest obtained permission to take him to a native village.

A few years ago, Mlle. Porier interested herself in Ullmo. She worked tirelessly to win his freedom and early in June he was pardoned—free to return to a world which held terrifying changes consummated since he was exiled.

Mlle. Porier met Ullmo this morning when he landed at Havre and accompanied him to Paris. It was the first meeting of the pair and they decided to marry immediately.

Roosevelt's Ship Enters Tropic Seas

Aboard U. S. S. Gilmer, accompanying President Roosevet, July 3 (AP).—Speeding down Atlantic coastal lanes far ahead of schedule, President Roosevet was past the coast of Florida tonight, his ship making 18 to 20 knots.

The cruiser Houston, in the bright sunshine of the afternoon, struck moderately smooth water and began to show her heels. Late tonight the Presidential party should be off San Salvador.

President Roosevelt hoped for an opportunity for some fishing tomorrow off the Bahama Islands, his favorite fishing grounds. He has plenty of spare time in reaching Cape Haitien Thursday, and Puerto Rico, the first landing, on Friday, as scheduled.

Everything appeared quiet on the Houston after a moderation of yesterday's heavy seas. This brought relief aboard the trailing destroyers, where there was considerable suffering from sea-sickness.

News reports made available to the President told of the longshoremen's situation on the West Coast and it was assumed he was watching this closely.

He was occupying his time between resting, reading and working. He has fun reading the reports of land-going reporters in the Glimer who are filing through the Houston's wireless. Some of their nonnautical terms appeared to amuse him greatly.

The 13,000-mile voyage will take the President into the Pacific, to Hawaii and the American West Coast. The U. S. S. New Orleans has been ordered to replace the U. S. S. San Francisco as convoy across the Pacific, the latter vessel having damaged a propeller.

Puerto Rico Awaits Rehabilitation Plan

San Juan, P. R., July 3 (Spl.). This city today started decorating for the arrival of President Roosevelt, now on board the cruiser Houston in the subtropics.

The warship is expected to anchor in the harbor of Ponce and the President will motor here over the oldest road in America. It was built by the Spaniards, in a winding

Veteran Dies Of Heat Here

Mercury Mounts to 95; Weather Man Again Says "Cooler."

Continued promise of cooler temperatures, with thundershowers in the offing, was the forecast of the local Weather Bureau late yesterday. The day's high point of 95 degrees at 3 p. m. caused one death and one prostration here, with two others overcome in Baltimore and one drowned.

Today should be somewhat cooler, with gentle shifting winds becoming northerly. Temperatures yesterday mounted steadily from 90 at noon, 92 at 1 p. m., 94 at 2 p. m., to 95, which endured until 4 p. m., with a drop of 1 degree at 5 p. m.

John Frank Dunn, 40, war veteran, of 811 Twelfth street northwest, who was found unconscious yesterday afternoon on the sidewalk in front of his home by ambulance attaches, died in Gallinger Hospital early last night. He had been ill of pulmonary tuberculosis and undernourishment. The day's extreme heat aggravated his condition and caused his death.

Dunn had no known relatives here but his father is said to live in Orange, N. J.

Sherman Miller, 27, of Lyon Village, Va., collapsed on the street yesterday afternoon as he left a downtown theater which operates a cooling system. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital, condition undetermined.

Two persons were overcome by the heat at Baltimore and one man was drowned last night as he sought relief from the torrid weather in the Patapsco River. At 4 p. m. the mercury has soared to 97 degrees with thunder showers as the only likely source of relief.

George Jamar, the man who was drowned, had gone with friends to the Patapsco River. He swam to its center and companions heard him cry for help. Unable to aid him, they recovered his body a half hour later.

William A. Connor, 56, vice president of the New Amsterdam Casualty Co., was one of the Baltimoreans overcome by the heat. He fell at one of the entrances to the city hall, and at Mercy Hospital his condition was called serious.

Dr. Ragsdale Drowns At Maryland Beach

Army Probe Set to Study Fee Charges

Nation-Wide Hunt Is On for Speicher, Missing Witness.

Armed with evidence from the books and records of the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co. of Philadelphia, House investigators will start tomorrow to study a situation believed to involve a number of high Army officers in the illegal acceptance of fees while on active duty.

The House Military Affairs Investigating Committee, represented by its acting chairman, Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, made it clear that other companies beside Atwater Kent are involved in the probe.

Kvale was closeted for six hours yesterday with James L. Schwank, an Atwater Kent executive. At the end of the secret session, it was announced the committee will hold no further hearings for the present, but will go over the evidence obtained from Schwank and gathered by its investigators in New York and Philadelphia.

Schwank gave the committee details of his company's transactions with Col. Joseph I. McMullen, of the Judge Advocate General's staff, who has admitted receiving some $5,000 from Atwater Kent for work on a patent case. McMullen is to testify again concerning fees he accepted from the radio firm and the Cuban-American Manganese Co. of New York.

The committee's hearings will be resumed later this month when its chairman, Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, returns to Washington.

Investigators reiterated they feel certain they are on the verge of important disclosures, which may involve other high Army officers in offenses similar to McMullen's.

Nation-Wide Hunt On For Missing Witness

A Nation-wide hunt for a missing witness was disclosed yesterday by Congressional investigators looking into War Department activities and expenditures, the Associated Press reported.

The witness is Frank E. Speicher, for whom Justice Department operatives have been searching for weeks. He is wanted to tell the House Military Affairs Committee about efforts he is said to have made to get the War Department to change contract specifications.

Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, already has told the committee in executive session what he knows about Speicher.

Several months ago, Woodring said, specifications were drawn for the purchase of Army trucks. Where the specifications previously had called for a combination splash-force feed oiling system, Woodring said that on the advice

Riots Mark Break In Marine Strike

Police Quell Fights With Gas; 20 Hurt, 1 Shot.

San Francisco, July 3 (U.P.).—To accompaniment of widespread rioting, fist fights and popping of gas and bombs, the Industrial Association of San Francisco today carried out its promise to begin moving freight from waterfront piers, blockaded since May 9 by a strike of marine workers.

Twenty persons were severely injured, one man was shot and slightly wounded, a half-dozen motor trucks were turned over and many persons went home with burning eyes from gas. Through it all trucks moved at the rate of about 10 per hour from the McCormick Steamship Co.'s pier to a warehouse half a mile away.

Boy Shot at Play, Companion Held

Richard Stockdale, 13, of 757 Nineteenth street northeast, is at Casualty Hospital in a serious condition as result of a shot wound, said to have been inflicted accidentally at play yesterday afternoon.

The youth who admitted firing the shot, according to police, is George Guntrow, 18, of 1692 Kraemer street northeast, who is held at the Ninth Precinct Station pending outcome of the boy's wound.

Guntrow told police that he and Stockdale and several other boys had taken a .32-caliber rifle to a pond in the vicinity of M and Twenty-eighth streets northeast yesterday afternoon, where they spent some time shooting at frogs. Tiring of this sport, the boys separated, Stockdale and some other boys leaving Guntrow and the others in the party.

Guntrow said that a short time later he saw a bird on a bush close to the ground and fired at it. He heard a scream and found he had shot Stockdale in the side. The bullet lodged in the boy's liver. Hospital physicians say his recovery is doubtful.

Hitler Flies for Parley; Crisis Up to President; Von Papen Ouster Fails

Germany's Fate Up to Him

Drawing by Davis

The aged President Paul von Hindenburg appeared last night to have taken a new hold on Germany's troubled affairs. As commander of the regular army, he holds tremendous power now that Chancellor Hitler's Storm Troopers have been disrupted. He also has the final word as to whether Vice Chancellor von Papen will be ousted in favor of Prussian Premier Goering, Hitler's right-hand man.

Dramatic Plane Trip Follows Session of Cabinet.

Vice Chancellor's Status in Doubt

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 3.—A new crisis in the Nazi government tonight sent Chancellor Hitler by airplane to the side of President Paul Von Hindenburg, the one man who is credited with being able to do what he pleases in Germany by making use of the regular army.

The chancellor dashed dramatically from a cabinet meeting to the airport after a carefully-planned scheme to remove the president's old friend and protege, Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen, from office fell through.

Everybody a few hours before had been saying that Von Papen would resign and be succeeded by Hitler's colleague in Saturday's bloody "liquidation," Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

During the day-long cabinet session, called to reorganize the blood-purged Nazi government, correspondents waited for the word they had been told to expect—that Von Papen, conservative critic of some Nazi policies, was out.

Brief Statement Issued.

Finally, a propoganda ministry spokesman said of Von Papen's removal from power: "It may, in fact, never become a fact."

"One of our leaders," he added, "has gone outside of Berlin by airplane and that may change things. That is all I can say now."

The leader was Hitler.

His trip was to the country estate of the President, from which word came yesterday that "on Hindenburg was holding the Reichswehr (regular army) responsible for the safety of Von Papen, then a prisoner in his own home.

The exact status of Von Papen was not clear after these unexpected developments. While at first it was stated that he attended the

Stone and Cronin Hit One Each and Foxx Two; Weaver Wins.

By Shirley L. Povich (Sports Editor, The Post).

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Pa., July 3.—Jimmy Foxx hit two home runs against the Washington pitching today, but, dear reader, don't jump to conclusions. Those two homers served only to temper the grief of the handful of Philadelphia fans who saw their Athletics soak up a 12-6 beating by the Nats in a game that was as free and loose as Hitler with his execution orders.

There was nothing backward about the Nats, either, in the home-run-hitting line. Johnny Stone and Joe Cronin each bunted a circuit clout into the home-run territory in this pitch-and-putt course and called their shots with better judgment than did Foxx, who contributed both his homers with the bases empty.

Buddy Myer was aboard the bases when Stone lifted his homer out of the park in the sixth inning

Bullets Peril Children In Chicago Gang Death

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—Bullets flew around a group of children as gangsters today snuffed out the life of Fred Enright, 25, reputed hoodlum, just off the Gold Coast. Enright was sauntering along North Clark street on the near north side, when he was killed. Skipping along almost at his heels were three small children.

The body was identified by Robert Jasperson, a garage employe, whose son, Kay, was killed in a similar manner while with Enright on St. Patrick's Day.

Early Parley Of Dictators Is Predicted

Dollfuss, Hitler, Duce Expected to Meet in Braunau.

Vienna, July 3 (U.P.).—Conference soon among Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini, the "big three" in fascism in Europe, was predicted in diplomatic quarters here tonight.

The three dictators probably will meet at Braunau, or nearby, possibly before Dollfuss proceeds to Italy to visit Mussolini, a trip he contemplates making shortly.

Dollfuss' attention is concentrated on the probable effect the German upheaval will have on Austro-German relations. With the elimination of the radical bloc, it was hoped here that the Nazi terrorism would cease, and that strained relations between the two countries could be eased.

Already as a result of Hitler's housecleaning, bombings in Austria have begun to recede, and since July 1 there have been comparatively few. With the radical Storm Troop element eliminated in Germany, the supply of explosives to Austria agitators was expected to fall off sharply.

Concern was felt here for the fate of the Austrian Nazi legion in Germany. Reports from Munich, headquarters, said the legion was split three ways—one group remaining faithful to Hitler, one to the late Ernst Roehm and a third seeking permission to return to Austria, where the Nazis long have been outlawed.

Several supporting Roehm were arrested and some have been shot, dispatches said.

Reds Blamed for Cuban Fire.

Havana, July 3 (AP).—A fire believed to be incendiary broke out today in the Henry Clay Tobacco Factory, owned by American interests. Company officials blamed Communists. They said the damage would amount to about $5,000.

Mule to Pull Him Out of Red Refused; He'll Get Ox Instead

Washington Pounder, colored Mississippian, who wrote the Government recently asking for a mule, is not likely—it was said with regret in official circles yesterday—to get the animal, but he may be placed on the waiting list for an ox, the Associated Press reported.

Mules cost quite a bit of money. The Federal Relief Administration keeps a case history on each and every one donated to a needy family. Oxen are cheaper, eat less and in portions of Alabama and North Carolina, officials said, they are pulling the plow just as well as the mule and are far less temperamental.

There are instances, supported by affidavits, which attest that a fire had to be built under a balky mule to get him started. Authentic reports are that a recalcitrant steer may be moved by a swift kick from the rear. No sane man ever attempted that with a mule.

But the loan, sale, or donation of an ox by the Relief Administration may be the proverbial stepping stone to a mule.

The task at hand is to furnish the head of a rural family on relief something with which he can make a living. If he gets an ox, and then proves trustworthy and capable, he may get a mule later. In that event, the ox may be butchered for a graduation celebration. Some officials contend that any man who makes a living with a pair of oxen, would put money in the bank with a team of mules.

Austria Stirred By 2 Outrages

Vienna, July 3 (AP).—A dynamite blast in the Salzburg police headquarters and a fire in Vienna city hall, possibly of incendiary origin, together with minor bombings in various parts of Austria today kept government officials busy trying to tighten their defense against terrorists.

The police headquarters was severely damaged by the explosive which was placed on the second floor, although the building was heavily guarded.

Today's outbreak—it has not yet been determined for certain whether the city hall fire was the work of terrorists—added to a long, systematic campaign against the government in which nine persons met death.

The death list is small when it is considered that hundreds of bombs have been set off, indicating that the bombers—Nazis or Socialists, or both—are not seeking to kill.

The government, on the other hand, has not yet carried out its threat to execute persons convicted of terrorism, although several Nazis and Socialists have been sentenced to prison.

Dillinger and Pair Sighted in Indiana

Muncie, Ind., July 3 (U.P.).—City Policeman Floyd Privett today reported that John Dillinger and two companions drove through the busiest downtown street intersection.

An automobile load of policemen went in pursuit of the car in which the criminal was reported riding, but were unable to trace the car.

Dillinger was accompanied by a man and a woman, Privett said. The man was driving the automobile and Dillinger and the woman sat in the front seat with the driver.

Privett reported he was positive in his identification.

Widow Faces Murder Charge in Gentry Case

Jefferson, Wis., July 3 (AP).—Mrs. Carrie Gill, 39, a widow at whose home Earl Gentry lived for seven years, today was charged with first degree murder in the slaying of the former bodyguard of D. C. Stephenson, once grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan.

Oratory, Music And Fireworks To Feature 4th

Celebration at Monument to Be Greatest in D. C. History.

A salvo of multi-colored bombs and star-shells, accompanying a set-piece, entitled ::Past and Present," in which will be outlined in fire immense portraits of George Washington and President Roosevelt, will climax Washington's official Fourth of July celebration on the Monument grounds this evening.

The display, which will begin at 8:30 p. m., after preliminary ceremonies at 7:15 p. .m, is to be one of the most elaborate in the history of the District. Explosive fireworks of all sorts have been forbidden by order of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Citizens have been urged to display flags in windows and on lawns throughout the day, however. The citywide celebration that will precede the exercises will include a varied program of sports and other activities sponsored by community groups in almost every section of the District.

Open With Concert.

The negro program will open at 7:15 p. m., with a patriotic concert by the Army Band conducted by Capt. William J. Stannard.

Boxes seating six persons will line the front of the vast section of 8,500 chairs, which will be occupied by the public at 25 cents a seat, which, with the income from the 60 boxes, will cover the cost of the celebration.

Ticket booths are installed on the Monument Grounds, and tickets will be on sale all day

The procession of flags and massing of the colors will be in charge of Maj. William T. Roy, D. C. N. G., and his aids.

"The Spirit of '76" by three students at George Washington University, will lea dthe procession of 13 flags down from the Monument to meet the two sections of the military and patriotic organizations coming from the right and left roadsides to the stand. Boy Scouts, will carry the 13 flags, and "The Spirit of '76" will be presente dby David Flax, Elmer Klavens and Austin Roe, as grandfatner, father and son, with their fife and drums playing "Yankee Doodle" as they march.

Yaden to Preside.

James G. Yaden, first vice chairman of the citizens committee appointed by the District of Columbia Commissioners to arrange for the celebration will preside and will introduce the speakers. The Rev. Benjamin Meeks, District of Columbia superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will deliver the invocation; Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the United States Senate, will read the Declaration of Independence ,and former Gov. Charles Hillman Brough, of Arkansas, will deliver the oration.

Then as the committee and honor guests leave the speakers stand to take their places among the audience on the hillsides, the lights will be dimmed and across the hills will come the procession of torches and sparklers, borne by Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and in the red glare of this procession "retreat" will be sounded by the buglers and the vast procession of flags will leave the stage just as the first shells and bombs of the fireworks display sound and rockets shoot high into the air.

But before the red flares die out and the sparklers are finally extinguished and even before the color bearers leave their position at the stands, there will appear two firt portraits in blazing lights of George Washington and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, followed by an inspiring vision of "Miss Columbia," a gigantic figure astride a horse, moving across the pyrotechnic field, as myriads of colored shells and glittering stars proclaim that the fireworks have begun.

The climax of the display will come with the "Battle of Yorktown," a thrilling scene in which the British redoubts are labeled by the Yankee guns, and the whole scene is culminated in a vast electrifyied finale offering the most thrilling effects in modern pyrotechnics.

Services at Arlington.

One of the important events of the morning will be the services at the Arlington Amphitheater, when the Jewish War Veterans of the United States dedicate a memorial placque to the Unknown Soldier, at 11:30. Senator Millard C. Tydings, of Maryland, will deliver the principal address and the United States Navy Band will play.

The 10-mile open marathon for the District of Columbia A. A. U. championship wil be run for the sixth consecutive year beginning at 1:30 p. m. The marathon will begin on Memorial boulevard and will finish at Takoma Park at approximately 2:30.

The Citizens Committee has provided medals and cups for the programs of sports and games throughout the city, which are sponsored by neighborhood and citizens association committees in Fort Bayard Park, Wesley Heights and Spring Valley, Takoma Park, Taft Recreation Center, Anacostia Park, and all public swimming pools, tennis courts, baseball diamonds and golf courses.

Yeast Wages to Rise Under New NRA Code

Wages will rise shortly in the yeast industry.

Recovery Administrator Johnson yesterday approved a code specifying that the minimum wage rate shall be 45 instead of 40 cents an hour as proposed.

The maximum work week will be 40 hours. Officials estimated code labor provisions would produce an employment increase of 31 per cent over June 1929 and 17 per cent over June 1933.

Decrease Show In Per Capita Factory Wages

Figures Still Higher Than at Any Time Since 1931, Report Says.

Factory workers over the Nation lost .1 per cent of their per capita average weekly earning in May as compared with April, but their wgaes are still higher than in any other month since October, 1931, and 20 per cent higher than in May, 1933.

These figures were announced yesterday by Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, and were computed from pay roll reports supplied by 22,718 establishments employing 3,812,160 workers. The weekly earnings fo factory employes, he said, averaged $19.81.

Lubin said 51 of the 90 manufacturing industries surveyed showed gains in per capita weekly earnings from April to May, the gains raging from 0.2 to 12.7 per cent. The largest increases were in the following trades: Fur felt hats, shipbuilding, wirework, marble, granite, slate and the like, blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills, structural and ornamental metalwork and cash registers.

Decreased weekly earnings were shown in 39 of the industries. The largest losses were in the following: Beet sugar, hardware, corsets and allied garments, men's clothing, women's clothing, millinery, cotton goods, glass, turpentine and rosin, iron and steel forging and rubber tires and inner tubes.

Wage-rate increases between April 15 and May 15, averaging 7.3 per cent and affecting 107,411 workers, were reported by 517 of the 22,718 manufacturing establishments. Increases in wage rates were reported by various establishments in 71 of the 90 manufacturing industries covered in the survey.

Man-hour data supplied by 17,384 manufacturing establishments showed a drop of 1.4 per cent in average hours worked per week and an increase in average hourly earnings of 0.9 per cent over last year.

Gains from April to May in per capita weekly earnings were shown in 10 of the 15 nonmanufacturing industries surveyed, the outstanding gain being 13.2 per cent in anthracite mining. The average weekly earnings in this industry in May were $29.27.

The telephone and telegraph industry showed a 3.9 per cent gain in weekly wages.

Before more than half of the populace of the island, the President is expected to deliver a speech here outlining the major aspects of the rehabilitation plan for Puerto Rico.

On the heels of his sweeping repeal of the Platt amendment, which irked Cubans for 35 years, the President comes to Puerto Rico to straighten out another tangle.

The American flag has been flying here since 1898 in a dignified, but extremely uncomfortable manner. The natives have felt sort of humilated over the rule of the War Department. President Wilson instituted home rule, but still leaving on the military straps.

The population increased, land ownership shifted to a few influential corporations. Unemployment and near starvation followed in the wake of the so-called era of prosperity in the early 20's. When the depression hit the States in 1929, Puerto Rico was already down.

Mr. Roosevelt, shortly after taking office, transferred the affairs of the island from the War to the Interior Department. It is known that he has some kind of rehabilitation plan which he expects to outline in his speech. Also while here the President is expected to look into the immediate relief needs of approximately 110,000 families on the island.

Rail Mediator May Shift Old Working Rules

"Fatherel Jobs" Cause of Labor Clashes, Are Now Called Obsolete.

(Associated Press.)

The Federal coordinator of transportation yesterday began an inquiry into working rules covering railroad employes.

These rules, often called "feathered jobs" or "constructive allowances" depending on which side of the fence the person lives, have been the cause of friction between some railroads and labor although they were originally agreed upon in joint conferences in order to prevent or correct unjust conditions.

The rules provide arbitrary payment in addition to straight time and overtime pay when men have to do certain types of work such as switching at points where the service is fairly heavy but no switch engine is maintained.

Joseph B. Eastman, the coordinator, said it had been frequently claimed that certain of the rules have become obsolete or unduly restrictive and are no longer necessary to safeguard the interest of employes owing to changed conditions. The inquiry is designed to establish whether these claims are correct.

What action will be taken by the committee in case violent objections are raised by interested American industries was not announced.

Prince Consort Of Netherlands Dies Suddenly

The Hague, Netherlands, July 3 (AP).—Only a few months after the passing of the queen mother, the Dutch royal family was plunged into mourning again today by the death of Prince Henry, the husband of Queen Wilhelmina.

The prince consort, 58, died suddenly at 3 p. m. of heart disease before the queen could reach his bedside.

Flags at Half-Mast.

The nation's flags were placed at half-mast in tribute to the popularity and kindness of the affable man who, a German by birth, became a loyal Hollander and by his unaffected manner won the friendship of the people.

The social life of the nation was halted for a perioid of mourning, among the canceled events being a Fourth of July reception at the American Legation.

The prince consort, Henry Yladimir Albert Ernest, had been ill since March 28, when he suffered a fainting spell in his headquarters at the Red Cross, but he was thought to be improving.

Queen Wilhelmina hurried from Switzerland at the time. Today, however, she was not at the palace when the Prince's condition suddenly took a turn for the worse.

In the early days of the couple's married life there had been much gossip about their disagreements. The Queen's firm will in conflict with the Prince's was said to produce an atmosphere in the palace that became electrical at times.

Had One Daughter.

They had one daughter, Princess Juliana, who was in London at the time of her father's death. She had planned to return tomorrow because of her father's illness.

A typical "land-junker," the Prince was interested in questions affecting the management of estates, agriculture and reforestation. His favorite recreation was the chase and in his younger years he hunted in India, Ceylon and Palestine.

of Army officers he changed it to all force feed.

Later, the committee has been told, Speicher tried to have the specifications restored to their original form. Before any change was made, however, the grand jury investigation of the War Department started, and the specifications and bids all were thrown out.

Represented Tire Firm.

The committee wants to find out who Speicher's friends were and if any of them were employed in the War Department. At the time of the splash-force feed specifications, he was representing a puncture-proof tire company.

The committee has been told that Speicher offered to aid the Chevrolet Motor Co., whose cars would have been barred had force feed been insisted upon.

Norman K. Haig, representative of the General Motors Fleet Corporation, which handles Chevrolet sales to the Government, told the committee that Speicher never had been employed by his concern.

New York Hunt Fails.

J. B. Woodside, another General Motors representative, told the committee Speicher had not been directly employed by General Motors but had offered to see what he could do about the specifications. Speicher's only interest, Woodside testified, was in tires.

On another occasion, Woodside added, Speicher without pay did represent General Motors at the opening of some bids at the Agriculture Department. The reason, Woodside asserted, was that no other General Motors representative was available.

Recently, the committee heard that Speicher was in New York City. But Justice Department agents were unable to find him.

Faces Close Scrutiny.

Indications that Kennedy's stewardship will be closely scrutinized for the next few months were forthcoming from Capitol Hill, where Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee said Senate opposition to confirmation will depend "on the record he makes."

The veteran Florida Senator conceded Kennedy a good representative of the "Capitalistic class" and opined there was nothing improper in pool operations at the time Kennedy was a participant.

Anxious to get started, the newly elected chairman, president of a Boston bank at 25, and stanch friend of Franklin Roosevelt since Washington's hectic war days, outlined his purposes briefly last night in a radio speech.

To Protect Investors.

"In speaking for the members of the commission," he said, "I wish to emphasize that our one goal will be to protect the interests of the great mass of American investors.

"This does not mean that legitimate business, including the securities business, must suffer. Instead, regulation, properly conceived and honestly administered, will make our investment machinery serve the needs of commerce and will bring about confidence in our financial institutions and their methods."

He said every member of the commission concurs in the expressed views of the President that "the exchanges for dealing in securities are necessary and of definite value to our commercial life. Nevertheless it should be our National policy to restrict as far as possible the use of those exchanges for purely speculative operations."

At an earlier press conference, Kennedy was disclosed as one of the first to suggest stock market regulation to the President.

Informally affable, with a trace of Boston-Irish brogue despite his Harvard background; the father of nine children, one of whom was tutored at Harvard by the liberal Felix Frankfurter; Kennedy insists the drastic regulatory act is "workable."

"There is nothing in this law which any stock exchange or honest trader need fear," he said.

Praises Pecora, Landis.

But he modestly admitted he "didn't hope to know as much about the act" as Pecora and Commissioner James M. Landis, who, he said, "put their blood into it."

From a purely business standpoint, he said, speculation is less profitable than legitimate investments, and can not be expected to average more than 5 per cent on a long pull.

All the commission can expect to do for the speculator, he said, is "see that the market isn't rigged."

He believes that a "National consciousness" has set in against manipulation and pool operations since the stock market crash of 1929 that would deter many former operators from wanting to enter the market again in that role.

A preliminary search for quarters led the new commissioners to believe they may be housed permanently with the Federal Trade Commission in the old Interstate Commerce Commission Building.

Breathing Spell Slows Tempo Of "New Deal"

But Dizzy Pace Again Will Be Evident in Fall, After Elections.

By Raymond Clapper.

The tempo of the New Deal has slowed down almost to that of a snail marking time since President Roosevelt left on his vacation cruise.

A year ago the New Dealers were toiling until the small hours every night, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays included. They have continued at that dizzy pace all year. Now the big let down has come.

It is on President Roosevelt's orders. He has noted the tired faces around him. He said in his last broadcast that he himself wanted to get away so he could see the forest instead of the trees. His crew was showing some signs of jumpiness and this atmosphere was spreading out into the country. So it was thought to be a good thing for the Administration general staff to get a rest, or at least a change, and at the same time give the country the benefit of a relief from Washington for the moment.

Just a Breathing Spell.

But they will all be back, and the New Deal will be pushing under full draft again early in the fall. There is no change of policy, just a breathing spell.

In fact, the plans are for more rather than less of the Roosevelt program, provided all goes well in the fall elections. The President has set up a group of planning committees. The Industrial Emergency Committee, under Donald Richberg, will concern itself not only with adjusting conflicts among emergency agencies, but will draft plans for what is to follow NRA. The National Resource Board will lay out a plan for transferring farm families off of submarginal land and for better utilization of land, water and other natural resources. The Committee on Economic Security will draw blueprints for old-age pensions and other welfare measures.

Meantime, the holiday exodus has begun. Some are away for a July 4 holiday, others are on longer summer vacations and a few are taking time out to make speeches as part of the campaign to sell the Administration's policies to the country in preparation for the fall elections.

Most of Cabinet Away.

All except two cabinet members were out of town over the holiday. Secretary of State Hull motored down into Virginia. Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau is on his way to a western ranch where there will be no telephone. Secretary of War Dern sailed yesterday for a leisurely cruise to Panama. Attorney General Cummings is being taken for a boat ride down the Potomac today by a friend. Postmaster General Farley went to New York to shoot firecrackers with his children.

Secretary of Navy Swanson left yesterday for a Potomac cruise aboard the Sequoia. Secretary of Interior Ickes stayed at home and expected to put in a few hours' work at his office. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is away making a speech. Secretary of Commerce Roper is on a cruise to Alaska. Secretary of Labor Perkins decided to stick it out in Washington.

Relief Administrator Hopkins sails for Europe today. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson went to New York; Donald Richberg is flying to Fort Worth to make a speech; James A. Moffett, the new housing administrator, Averill Harriman of NRA and a group of other officials are in New York—some of them at Saratoga Springs.

Sees "Tired Minds."

"Everybody ought to get away," said one New Dealer yesterday, ignoring the fact that almost everybody was away. "I see all around me evidence of tired minds, of persons who are going through the regular motions but whose minds are not really working."

The new Communications Commission will not meet until July 11. The new Aviation Board will meet July 10. The new Federal Securities and Exchange Commission will hold its first meeting tomorrow, but its work will be largely preparatory until September 1, when the main provisions of the stock market control act go into operation.

Newspaper reporters, who have put in a busy year themselves trying to keep up with the New Dealers, were planning to take full advantage of this lull by resting up in the air-conditioned press quarters in the White House and the House and Senate press galleries.

But there's been a plot against the press!

The White House air-cooled offices have been ordered closed next week for remodeling, and the reporters will have to camp in the lobby of the Mansion, without air-cooling. And the cooling in the House and Senate galleries is being turned off tomorrow. They have to save money some way in this Administration.

Screen Stars Named In Los Angeles Suits

Los Angeles, July 3 (AP).—Two screen stars and their wives were named in municipal lawsuits here today.

An assignee for Dr. E. E. Pasette asserted in one complaint that Harry "Bing" Crosby and his wife, Dixie Lee Crosby, have neglected to pay a $1,000 doctor bill for the care of their infant son, Gary. Another suit charged Pat O'Brien and his wife, Eloise Taylor O'Brien, owe their landlady, Etta Goldsmith, $520.97 for damage to household furnishings.

Air Mail Special Stamp To Be Oistinctive Color

A model of the new 16-cent combination air mail-special delivery stamp was sent to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing yesterday by Postmaster General Farley.

An American eagle with wings spread will grace the new issue. The stamp will be the same size as the old special delivery sticker. Its color will be announced after dye tests. The tint will be outstanding, to enable easy recognition by posta clerks.

Reich Crisis Up to Hindenburg

cabinet session, it was learned later that he was not present, although he had talked with Hitler earlier in the day. Guards still stood around his home.

Before this sudden development threw out of gear the plans for reorganizing the government, Hitler had announced that the reign of terror which swept scores of trusted but traitorous Nazi leaders to their graves is at end.

Death List Withheld.

At the same time, though, the nation was warned that Germany is ruled with an iron fist and a strong will.

Even after stating the stern measures were no longer in effect, the government continued to withhold its promised list of those "liquidated" by bullets as Hitler struck at "traitors" among Radicals and Conservatives alike.

It was stated that the total number killed was "below 60," a figure which did not agree at all with statements of eye-witnesses of some of the executions, to the effect that hundreds fell.

The status of the Storm Troopers, once the backbone of the Nazi party, appeared in doubt.

Well-informed persons stated that not more than 20 per cent of the 2,000,000 members of the brown-shirted army will be called back to duty at the end of the July vacation.

On the other hand, at Munich, blue-eyed, sharp-featured Victor Luetze, new commander of Chancellor Hitler's Storm Troop organization, said after a conference with Hitler that so far as he knows there is no reduction planned in the personnel of the Brown Shirts.

"The Storm Troopers," said Luetze, "are and always will be what they were meant to be—the shock troops of the National Socialist movement."

Newspapers "About Face."

Inspired newspapers which a few days ago were generous in their praise of Ernest Roehm, supreme commander, and others who were executed Saturday, today published long denunciations of the conduct of the brown-shirted army and its leaders.

The turning loose of more than 1,500,000 of these men, heretofore fed and clothed by the Nazi party, would mean a serious setback to Hitler's campaign against unemployment.

It would all but offset the claimed gains maded in the last year, and it is evident that subsidies to industries for payment of wages can not last much longer.

Hteir's oorder ending the measures adopted to suppress the mutiny was brief and for the first time definitely named the movement the "Roehm revolt."

"Measures for suppressing the Roehm revolt ended on the night of July 1," said the order, and added: "Whohsoever on his own account, no matter with what intentions, in the wake of this action shall make himself guilty of an act of violence, wil be handed over to the regular courts of justice for punishment."

Few Words Tell Voumes.

These few words told volumes, since at one stroke the public was assured there will be no more executioins and hotbloods were warned not to take matters into their own hands.

The belief persists some of those "liquidated," particularly while "resisting arrest," were victims of associates of Hitler acting more or less on their own initiative.

While the cabinet was holding its important session, Wilhelm-Strasse again became the scene of an impressive display of police strength.

Government automobiles filled the courtyard, and black-shirted members of the special Schutz Staffel guard were reinforced by husky plain-clothes men and policemen in uniform.

The crowd was kept moving, and no one was permitted on the sidewalk beside the chancellory.

At the same time the inner council of the Nazi party was in session to discuss the situation.

Flight of Prince Denied.

Rumors connecting members of the former royal family continued thick, but met with authentic denials.

Gen. von Dommes, head of the Hohenzollern administration here, denied flatly the latest report—that former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm had been expelled and had gone to Doorn by airplane.

"As a matter of fact," said the general, "I talked over a lot of business matters with his imperial highness this very morning.

"He had no idea of leaving Germany. Why should he? The imperial family is in no way involved in the events of the last few days. Not a shadow of suspicion falls on the Crown Prince."

The warning that an iron fist will rule Germany was made in Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Deobachter.

The newspapers turned their blasts furiously on the executed storm troop leaders, accusing them of bribery, misappropriation of party funds, and engaging in "unbridled luxury in dens of carousal, which many of the staff quarters really were."

New Name on Death List.

One new name was added today to the list of prominent persons reported killed. Munich heard Gustav von Kahr, the former Bavarian premier, who turned against Hitler after helping him plot the 1923 "beer cellar putsch," was killed. This could not be confirmed officially.

The famous "brown house" at Munich, scene of scores of important Nazi party councils in the past, was deserted, emphasizing the degredation of the Storm Troop element.

A Catholic priest, Father Muhler, was reported to have been killed in a cell where he was confined on a charge of criticizing Hitler.

Two members of the radical press department of the Storm Troopers were similarly added to the unofficial and unconfirmed list of the dead.

The growing importance of the Reichswehr (regular army) in the scheme of things was emphasized by an expression of gratitude from Adolf Wagner, Nazi district leader, who is believed by many to have initiated the bloody purge of the party.

Three Groups Planned Revolt.

Closer study of the names of those shot as "traitors" made it apparent today that the "revolt" was planned by three groups, not working together, but kept mutually informed of plans by go-betweens.

One group was said to have been represented by Roehm, another by Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, former premier, and the third by Eric Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party.

Roehm and his fellow conspirators wanted bigger places in the government, particularly in the Reichswehr and also wanted more radical economic policies—they have been called National Bolsheviks.

The Von Schleicher group regarded the foreign policy of Hitler as dangerous and believed suppression of free speech and a free press should cease.

This second group advocated the same policies as Von Papen, but the government has formally absolved the vice chancellor of guilt.

On behalf of the dead Klausener, there have been vigorous denials that he was engaged in any political activity, but it is kown he and many other churchmen were greatly disturbed by the anti-Christian trend of some Nazi leaders.

Reichswehr May Expand.

The new situation as it involves economic matters and foreign relations is no bed of roses for the governments.

Th seriousness of the throwing of disbanded Storm Troopers on the labor market at this time is fully realized by Hitler and his colleagues, but the possible enlargement of the Reichwehr, which may result, brikhtens the picture.

Hitler's brown-shirted party army has had favors in the way of better pay and more freedom of action which have been denied to the 100,000 men in the regular army.

The hope that France and other powers will permit the enlargement of the Reichswehr as a result of the dissolution of the Storm Troopers is strong in Nazi circles.

The present Storm Troop vacation ends July 31, but it is expected that long before that date the policy for the future will have been definitely outlined.

Before the cabinet assembled for today's session Hitler received Von Papen for a brief conference, meeting him for the first time since the vice chancellor was made a prisoner in his own private residence Saturday.

Guards Leave for Time.

For a time the guards were withdrawn from Von Papen's home, but later they were restored.

The presece of the guards, from one point of view, is a tribute to Von Papen, since they may be there to protect him from hot-blooded Nazis.

President von Hindenburg's warning that the Reichswehr must protect von Papen was followed by an increase in the number of guards on duty.

There was still a bit of sabre-rattling at anti-Nazis here and there today, despite Hitler's announcement that "special measures" were suspended.

Helmut Brueckner, Governor of Silesia, in a speech to subleaders, warned Catholic priests, whom he referred to as "sensitive old men," they would face firing squads if they "plot" against the government.

Daare's newspaper said ominously that "Jews had a hand in this conspiracy," although nothing to indicate activities against Jews has developed.

The well-guarded Wilhelmstrasse continued all day to draw crowds of men, women and childre nto stare at the Chancellor's home.

During the cabinet session hundreds were there, but all were silent—nobody wanted to be caught up on a chance remark.

Nobody, that is, except one bald, elderly man in a threadbare suit, who climbed on a bench and proclaimed: "I could tell Hitler a few things he doesn't know. It's a great secret."

The crowd and the police smiled, and the old man was not harmed.

Hitler gave the cabinet a full report of the attempted uprising of Storm Troop leaders and of the ruthless methods of summary executions by which it was quelled.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg, Minister of Defense, was delegated by his colleagues to thank Hitler for "saving the country from civil war."

"In the name of the cabinet and of the defense forces," the minister expressed gratitude for the "courageous and decisive action through which the nation was spared a civil war."

The chancellor, he added, had proved himself both a statesman and a soldier who had won a 'pledge of devotion" from the whole nation.

Number of Laws Adopted.

The cabinet found time to adopt a number of laws, one of which forbids solicitation of funds on streets, in restaurants and other public places.

This law will find about universal indorsement by the German public, which has ben sorely tried by the constant taking of collections by Storm Troopers and other Nazi organizations.

The cabinet gave formal legal sanction to the executions, adopting a law which stated:

"Measures adopted to quell the highly treasonable attacks on June 30 and July 1 and 2 are legal because they were undertaken as measures for the protection of the state when in danger."

It was decided also that henceforth the chief of the Storm Troopers will not hold a cabinet post, as did the executed Roehm.

A number of other minor decrees were enacted.

PWA Is Short Of Funds Again Ickes Reveals

$213,000,000 Now Spent of $400,000,000 Given by President.

Secretary Ickes yesterday revealed that the Public Works Administration is about to run out of money again, although President Roosevelt gave it $400,000,000 shortly before leaving on his vacation.

Consequently, Ickes said he plans to confer within the next few days with Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, regarding the RFC Congressional authorization to buy municipal bonds held by the PWA so that the latter may have additional funds for allocation.

Under the terms of the authorization carried in the ride: to the deficiency act, the RFC and the PWA may create a revolving fund of $250,000,000 for use by the PWA. Municipal bonds up to this amount may be purchased by the RFC from the PWA, and more bonds may be transferred as rapidly as the RFC sells its purchases. The only limitation on the exchange is that the RFC may not hold more than a quarter of a million dollars worth of the PWA bonds at one time.

At the end of last week Secretary Ickes had allocated $213,000,000 of the $400,000,000 made available out of the Congressional appropriation of $500,000,000. Yesterday Ickes said he did not know when the other $100,000,000 would be forthcoming.

The greater part of the $187,000,000 remaining to the credit of the PWA is earmarked for several large river and power projects started last year on the upper Mississippi River and in the Northwest by Army engineers.

The Mississippi River project already has been allocated $33,500,000, and Ickes said yesterday that the War Department probably would be given an additional $25,000,000 for continuation of this job, although Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, contends that $65,000,000 is needed.

Other river dredging and power projects which are scheduled to receive sustantial grants out of the current fund, together with the amounts that they already have received, follow:

Casper-Alcova power development and irrigation project in Wyoming, $12,000,000.

Bonneville Dam, on the Columbia River, Oregon, $20,240,700.

Fort Peck Dam and reservoir, which will control the flow on the Missouri River y means of a 175-mile-long lake, $25,000,000.

Grand Coulee Dam, ridge and power plant on Columbia River, in Washington, $15,000,000. This project is eing handled y the Reclamation Bureau of the Interior Department.

These projects, together with an assortment of non-Federal loan grants, already either allocated or practically agreed upon, are expected to exhaust the remaining $187,000,000.

Movie Code Time Limit Is Extended

August 15 New Deadline, Johnson Announces.

Extension until August 15 of the time limit for signing the motion picture code by exhibitors and distributors was announced yesterday by Recovery Administrator Johnson.

He acted on request of the code authority, which reported many exhibitors declined to assent "for good cause" and now wish to participate.

The exhibitors were reported to have held off to see what effect sharp criticism of the pact by the Darrow Review Board would have. The board charged existence of a monopoly to "squeeze out" independent producers and exhibitors.

Senate Sightseers Enjoy Full Liberty With Floor Empty

Sightseers are having a gala time in the Seante galleries since Congress adjourned. While the Seante was in session guides escorted groups into the galleries and there they sat and wondered under an injunction of silence—often confusing identities of Senators because the lawmakers were not at their own desks as designated on printed cards.

Cameras were forbidden during the session. Now visitors sit in the galleries and chatter among themselves. The guides tell them all about the Senate in loud voices. Now and then a visitor sneaks out a camera and takes some pictures, while no one seems to pay any attention.

"Cut It Out," Fugitive Bird Cries

This parrot may or may not be a spy, but he was seized yesterday while wandering in a suspicious manner through the secret sanctums of the Navy Building. "Cut it out," was his only reply to questions, and he bit the park police officer who finally captured him. Miss June Little, of the Navy Department, is trying to persuade the bird to talk.

3 Women Get Places on War Veteran Board

Hines Announces Trio to Sit on Claims Bench of Last Resort.

For the first time in history three women have been appointed by President Roosevelt to aid in passing on claims filed by wounded war veterans against the Government.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, announced yesterday the appointment as associate members of the Board of Veterans' Appeals of Mrs. Carroll Loy Stewart, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Thornton Lee Brown, of Joplin, Mo., and Mrs. Lucy S. Howorth, of Jackson, Miss.

The women will serve with 15 men chosen last year, including former Gov. William G. Pollard of Virginia, chairman. The board is a court of last resort for veterans seeking adjustment of claims.

Mrs. Stewart was educated at Drury College, Springfield, Mo., and Linderwood College, St. Charles, Mo. She formerly was Missouri president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. She is a member of the Southern California Civic Service League and the Municipal Power and Defense League.

As a widow of a Spanish War veteran, Mrs. Stewart has been active in welfare work among former service men.

Mrs. Brown formerly was a school teacher in St. Louis. Her civic interests include membership in the Century Club of Joplin and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Howorth formerly was an instructor in psychology at Randolph-Macon Women's College, Lynchburg, Va., of which she is a graduate. She also was graduated by the University of Mississippi Law School.

She is a former chairman of the Mississippi State Board of Law Examiners and United States commissioner for the southern district of Mississippi and a former member of that State's Legislature. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion Auxiliary and the Y. W. C. A.

Rivers Treaty Urged With Mexico by Daniels

Brownsville, Tex., July 3 (AP).—Ambassador Josephus Daniels said here last night he believes a treaty between the United States and Mexico over use of waters of the Rio Grande and the Colorado River would be reached soon.

In his address, the Ambassador to Mexico said the Roosevelt "New Deal," was almost identical with Mexico's six-year plan. The purpose of both plans, he said, is to return the Government to the people and put back in the hands of the laboring man his means of making a living.

Radio Favorite Headlining Fox Is Honor Guest

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It may be that "every dog has his day," but once in a while so does a cat.

GERTRUDE NIESEN.

Yesterday was the day for one particular cat—a maltese Angora, strangely bereft of the Angora's usual inclination to pack up and run when people come around. Of all the nomadic felines, the Angora is supposed to be least tractable to crowds and most addicted to getting himself away from there when opportunity offers. Not so this one. But, of course, there is a reason.

Why should any Angora cat of intelligence try to escape from the solicitous ministrations of such a charming young person as Gertrude Niesen, coheadlining the vaudeville bill at Loew's Fox this week with Will Mahoney, with whom she honestly divides honors—very sumptuous honors, to be exact about it?

I mean to say by all this that when we joined the group of theater, stage, broadcast and newspaper representatives gathered in the Presidential suite of the Willard yesterday at 1:30 to bid welcome to Washington to Miss Gertrude Niesen, one of the most exotic and most deep-throated of the stars of the ether, Miss Niesen was principally engaged in catering to the comfort of a huge maltese Angora that clung to her with the tenacity of a dramatic editor to an ice cream cone—or what have you—in temperatures like these.

Later on, this gorgeous specimen of her breed consented to doze peacefully on one of Mrs. Willard's damask settees in order to permit the rest of us to get a word in with her mistress.

This, indeed, was a greatly appreciated break. For Gertrude Niesen is one of the most unaffected, most companionable and most thoroughly democratic of all the stars of the theater or air who have happened along to the National Capital during a long procession of stellar visitations.

She is as exotic off as on the stage. Her hair is dark brown, her eyes dark and slanted a bit, Mongolian style, and her lips are full and red and incessantly on the verge, or worse, of breaking into laughter.

Her father, who accompanies her on her road tours, tells me that Gertrude is a great outdoors girl—loves tennis, deep-sea fishing, horseback riding, golf and all of the usual pursuits of athletic young people addicted to the open.

This is corroborated in part by Phil Lampkin, musical director at Loew's Fox, who sought to toy with Miss Niesen on the tennis courts a morning or two ago and had his racquet banged right out of his hand by the speed of her service—and paid off handsomely in cigars. Paid off, that is, in cigars to everybody but Gertrude. Gertrude doesn't smoke cigars.

Miss Niesen, by the way, is just as young as she looks—will be 22 on the eighth of the current month, when it was planned to have great goings-on in Baltimore, where she was supposed to have been playing, in honor of the occasion, but at the last minute the powers that be shifted the booking to the Capitol Theater, New York—and that was that.

Born on Ocean Liner.

I was glad to have made the mistake of assuming that Gertrude was born in San Antonio, Tex., like her dad, for he immediately corrected me and explained that Gertrude was born on an ocean liner coming from Europe to America and had lived most of her life in the East.

During her attendance at the Brooklyn Heights Seminary, Gertrude revealed an unusual voice and a deft knack at impersonation in the school's amateur productions and at private parties. Assured that her voice was of more than ordinary promise, Mr. and Mrs. Niesen placed their daughter under the tutelage of competent voice culturists and coaches, but not for long.

Wondering whether or not she was being kidded, Gertrude hied herself, unaccompanied, to a booking agency, was given an audition and three days later saw her name in electric lights up in front of the "300 Club" in New York.

That was the start. She has since scrambled to the heights as a radio star, has appeared in both short-reel and feature-length subjects for the Warner Brothers—notably "Sally," with Dorothy Stone, and "Darling Enemy," a Vitaphone short.

Sings Difficult Numbers.

If you notice, the numbers Miss Niesen sings at the Fox this week are no simple roundelays that any schoolgirl could do. Such things as "Temptation," "Tropical Heat Wave" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" require considerable doing. And what it takes to put them over Miss Niesen has in superabundance. Her mother abandoned an artistic career of her own to further her daughter's.

They tell me I caught the worst performance she has given—the first on Friday, when, owing to a mixup of buzzer signals, she was not ready to go on when her turn came; Will Mahoney, who was, went on in the No. 3 spot.

Well, if that was the worst performance Gertrude has given, I certainly shall go back to hear her again.

With any improvement, she must be plenty swell by now!

Miss Niesen, at the moment is on a 13-week leave of absence from the C. B. S. studios where she is under long-term contract to the "Big Show" hour. Ten of these 13 weeks will be devoted to vaudeville bookings, like the current week at the Fox, and three to having one of her typical outdoor vacations—deep-sea fishing, she hopes, which is utterly incomprehensible to me, who tried it once down in the Caribbean and remember nothing but the mast cutting figures eight in the air all night! Ugh!

Gertrude made her first broadcast a comparatively short time ago, on January 6, 1933. She has gone a long way since then.

And the end is not yet. She is a girl and a grand trouper, who has never learned to use a broad "a" or a lorgnette!

There should be no stopping her, with that voice.

Although the telegraphic invitations to the reception and luncheon in Miss Niesen's honor were mysteriously signed by City Manager Carter Barron, of the Loew interests in Washington, Mr. Barron, as stated in yesterday's column, will not return to the Capital until today. Lou Brown and Manager Steinbuch, successor to Roscoe Drissell at the Fox, conspired to perpetrate a little Western Union forgery and got away with it!

Those New Clubrooms.

While we were luncheoning in the Presidential suite, we took occasion, under the guidance of Lou Brown and A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Washington, to step across the hall and investigate the newly decorated quarters of the newly formed Variety Club, which may well be proud of its permanent home.

Artistry has not been subordinated to "showmanship" in the furnishing and equipment of the clubrooms and the members have every reason to preen themselves on the facilities placed at their disposal.

The Variety Club should prove a real addition to the agencies in the National Capital dedicated to a helpful usefulness as well as to agreeable social purposes.

I am more than ever grateful for having been included, along with the other dramatic desks, in a gratuitous membership in the club.

Lynn Overman, who steals a few scenes from the better-known principals in "Little Miss Marker," starring little Shirley Temple, at Loew's Fox, was formerly a popular Washington stock actor. He has a flair for comedy that few can match and runs a very close second to Adolphe Menjou for first honors in the Paramount screen rendition of the Damon Runyon short story.

Still Fighting Championship?

So popular have the official pictures of the Baer-Carnera heavyweight championship boxing match proved to be that Manager Hiser of the State Theater in Bethesda, Md., has held them over through Thursday of the present Fourth of July holiday week.

The pictures are shown throughout the day and evening and especial stress is laid by the management upon the desirability of attending the afternoon or early evening performances in order to relieve the strain on the late shows when the capacity of the house is not sufficient to hold the large numbers of Washingtonians eager to see in precisely what manner Master Baer socked his giant adversary bye-bye.

As we have remarked before, if any one can determine the slightest indication that Carnera broke his ankle in the first round, he is entitled to the hand-crocheted cocktail shaker!

Leo Carillo, last in Washington with the Warner Brothers Forty-second Street Special," which arrived in the Capital the morning of President Roosevelt's inauguration, will share headline honors with Wesley Eddy on the stage of the Earle Theater the week beginning Friday, July 13. Mr. Eddy needs no introduction to local theatergoers after 72 weeks, or something like that, as master of ceremonies at Loew's Palace and many vaudeville appearances here since. Neither does Leo Carillo. In case you don't immediately identify him, it was he who scored so decisively as Pancho Villa's chief henchman in "Viva Villa," starring Wallace Berry. There is no finer trouper trouping than Leo Carillo. It will be a pleasure to welcome him back to the Capital.

Educational Note.

Niesen, as in Gertrude Niesen, is spelled with one "s" and Carillo, as in Leo Carillo, is pronounced "Carillo"—so now you know.

Former Convict Freed At Trial for Murder

Nevada, Mo., July 3 (AP).—Virgil (Blackie) Wells, 38, former convict, was freed at his trial for the murder of Mrs. E. Pearl Dancey, poet and fiction writer, here today on an instructed verdict of acquittal. Circuit Judge John Schmook ordered the acquittal on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

Mrs. Dancey was found shot to death in her automobile at the Deepwood Cemetery last February 17. Wells surrendered several days later. He said he had been riding with Mrs. Dancey and declared she took her own life.

After 13 years' service as Public Printer, George H. Carter, of Iowa, retires. Photo shows Mr. Carter (left) watching A. E. Geigengack (center), of New York, being sworn in as his successor by Chief Clerk Henry H. Wright at Government Printing Office yesterday. During Mr. Carter's last year in service production records were broken, as the G. P. O. turned out vast quantities of printed matter in connection with the "New Deal" legislation, in addition to routine Government orders.

LOCAL leaders of the National Federation of Federal Employes yesterday hailed the return of the second 5 per cent of the pay cut for Federal employes and told just what that return means to them and to their organizations.

BAKER.

Dr. H. H. T. Jackson, Biological Survey, Agriculture, chairman of the membership committee of his department's branch of Local No. 2, addressed the following statement to his union and to the Agriculture employes:

"Again on July 1, because of a larger pay check, you have reason to be thankful that you are a member of the N. F. F. E. You are to be congratulated, too, on being socially minded.

"We can not rest on our oars ever. Working conditions should and can be made much better. An additional 5 per cent must be added to our salaries; 30 days' leave must be restored; 30 years' optional retirement must be adopted—to mention some of the more important issues."

Women employes in the Federal service perhaps have suffered the most from enforced economy. Miss Belle Trouland, president of the Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, No. 105, N. F. F. E., points out;

"The weight of the salary reduction and furloughs fell very heavily upon women employes in the 'bureau.' I am sure that few persons realize the large responsibilities which they bear, and the hardships which they have endured as a result of the economy enactments.

"Despite every handicap, however, they have been unfaltering in their loyalty and their devotion, and the efficiency of their work has been undiminshed.

"Partial restoration of pay will bring a much-needed measure of economic relief to this large group of employes. It will enable them to provide themselves with some of the necessaries of life which they have been forced to forego in the past months."

Joseph C. Stansfield, chief, railroad accounts section, Interstate Commerce Commission, president of Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., the oldest and largest Federal employes' organization in Washington, declared:

"Federal employes in the District of Columbia hailed with great enthusiasm the return of the second 5 per cent of the pay cut. This means a great deal to them because the curtailment of general living expenses in the period of economy has been a real hardship.

"The members of the N. F. F. E. should be particularly proud of this achievement, because this was accomplished through the intelligent leadership and effective and strenuous work of the organization. This adds another accomplishment to the long list previously obtained by the N. F. F. E."

Thirty employes of Examining Division, Comptroller of the Currency, Treasury, were in the throes of moving again yesterday. This time the nomadic division moved from the first to the third floor in the Treasury Building, over the cash room.

Weather Pageant Again.

Last week we wrote a little "Weather Pageant" on the wiles of the elements up to broiling July. Mrs. E. O. Howard (*), Aeronautics Branch, Commerce, asked who wrote that incomplete "bum" poem about the weather. After confession, we dared her to write one better, which she did in carrying the pageant on through the months after July, as follows:

And then will come: August
With shortening days;
September with cool, starry nights;
October will come with its harvesting moon;
November with turkey delights;
And then comes December with Santa and gifts,
And skating and sleighrides galore;
Then New Year steps in with its glorious fun,
Beginning the cycle once more.

FEDERAL employes from southern Illinois are urged to arrange their vacations so as to attend the Southern Illinois Day program at A Century of Progress Exposition on August 11. The Illinois State Society, of which Senator William H. Dieterich is president, is cooperating with the Chicago Egyptian Club for a large attendance. The club contains members representing 2,500 families which formerly lived in the counties south of the Vandalia Railroad.

Old-Time 'Smithy' Who Defied Age Of Autos Is Dead

Baltimore, July 3 (Spl.).—The last of the famed Rodgers Forge blacksmiths, George Rodgers, died in Union Memorial Hospital here today, after an operation for peritonitis.

For nearly a century the blacksmith shop at Rodgers Forge, on the York road between the city limits and Towson, was an important enterprise in the life of Baltimore County. Established in the early 1840's by George Rodgers' father, the shop was also a postoffice for that part of the county, many of the old Maryland families preferring to have their mail delivered to 'he smithy.

Even after the automobile became popular, the smithy remained prosperous, as old families with blooded horses had them shod at Rodgers' forge.

Several years ago, George Rodgers closed the shop and postoffice, and moved into Towson to live with his sister. He was 69 at the time of his death, and was believed to be the last old-time blacksmith in Baltimore County.

Danville Scores In Damage Suit

Danville, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—Danville scored an important point today at Roanoke when Judge H. C. Gregory after hearing argument by A. M. Aiken, city attorney, granted a writ of error in the case of the Forest Hills Development Co., against the City of Danville. The case will come up for review before the full court next fall.

A jury hearing the $102,000 damage suit in Circuit Court here returned a verdict for the city. Judge Turner Clement set the verdict aside and entered up judgment for $49,000 for the plaintiff.

The main contention in today's argument was that the court had no legal right in a case hinging on fact to set aside the jury's verdict.

The money will be used to install the interceptor sewer project. If a reasonable bid is obtained, the work will be put out on contract; otherwise it will be done by the city.

Early Declaration Of Liberty Bared

Proclamation Was Drafted by Washington Kin.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 3 (AP).—A proclamation of independence predating the famous Declaration of Independence was formulated in Fredericksburg in April, 1775, Mrs. Vivian Minor Fleming, president of the Kenmore Association, said today.

She said that the proclamation will be the subject of a celebration here tomorrow.

The document, Mrs. Fleming said, was the first in history to conclude with the treasonable phrase, "God save the liberties of America," instead of the required "God save the king."

"Why don't you tell people with sensitive throats about Old Golds?"

asks Dick Barthelmess
[AN OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1928]

Dear Mr. Barthelmess:—

People who watch their throats should not delay trying Old Golds. Once they've given this throat-ease cigarette a real tryout—you can bet they'll never be weaned away.

They'll find that Old Golds are made with smoother, mellower tobaccos—notably free from rasp and bite. Non-irritating even to the most delicate throat.

So thanks for your suggestion, Mr. Barthelmess. We've adopted it—as you see. And you may be the means of bringing new throat comfort and enjoyment to "people with sensitive throats."

Sincerely yours,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—It's this way, Mr. Barthelmess:—
No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

Virginia Looks For Balanced Budget Soon

Fiscal Year Begun in State With Deficit of $2,500,000.

Richmond, July 3 (Spl.).—Fiscal officers of the State today expressed hope that the deficit of $2,500,000 with which the State began its fiscal year on July 1, according to the estimate of John H. Bradford, State budget director, will be wiped out before the present biennium ends.

It is pointed out that State revenues are always behind general business conditions. The depression was not reflected in these revenues until a year or more after private business gave evidences of suffering. Consequently the revival shown for some months by private business will take some time before it is reflected in an increase in State revenues.

With the beginning of the first business day of the new fiscal year yesterday, John M. Purcell, State treasurer, was faced with $2,111,000 in demands on the State treasury. Of this amount $1,000,000 represented payments on State highway certificates of indebtedness which had already been refunded by a new issue providing enough money to pay off the old one.

In addition there was $380,000 of interest on the public debt, and additional sums for Confederate and retired teachers' pensions, for pay rolls and for general accounts amounting to $1,111,000. No difficulty was experienced in paying them.

The State highway department expects soon to receive more than $3,700,000 of Federal funds to be used in road construction, and allocation of this sum will be made at an early date.

Drink Stores To Shut Early

Virginians Must Lay in Holiday Supplies Before Noon.

Richmond, July 3 (Spl.).—Thirsty Virginians must shop early for their drinks tomorrow, for most A. B. C. stores will close at noon in celebration of the Fourth of July, it was announced today.

An exception, however, is being made in the four stores in the resort areas, at Virginia Beach, Ocean View, Phoebus (near Buckroe Beach), and the new store at Colonial Beach, which will open for the first time tomorrow.

Seven new stores are scheduled to open in the State this week in addition to the 25 already in operation. Besides the Colonial Beach store, stores at South Boston, Bluefield, Martinsville, Bristol, Fredericksburg and Charlottesville are scheduled to open in the next four days.

Approximately $184,000 was spent in the five Richmond stores operated by the A. B. C. during the month of June. Receipts during the latter half of May were $116,000.

Suffolk to Play Host to Firemen

Suffolk, Va., July 3 (AP).—Virginia firemen will meet here from August 7 to 10 in their forty-eighth annual convention. A diversified program of entertainment is being arranged.

The annual reel races, always an important feature of the convention, will be held at 10 a. m. August 9. Loving cups and handsome prizes will be given winners in competitive events.

The visiting firemen, coming from every section of the State, will be entertained at a baseball game the second day of the convention, and a block dance will be given in their honor that night. The grand parade will be held August 10, with over 3,000 men expected to take part. Afterward the firemen will gather at the four county fair grounds for an old-fashioned fish fry. The women's auxiliary will also be in session, holding its business meeting on August 8, when new officers will be elected.

Three Flee Penal Farm at Roxbury

Hagerstown, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—Three inmates at the State penal farm, at Roxbury, near here, who escaped last night were still at large today.

Those who escaped are David Embley, 20, Hagerstown, serving three years for larceny; Chaney Burt, 22, Baltimore, serving one year for attempted robbery, and Douglas Kay, 21, Baltimore, serving from two to seven years for assault with deadly weapons.

Of the 27 inmates who have escaped since the farm was established two years ago, all except one were recaptured until the three escaped last night.

Thomas O'Leary Requiem Is Sung

A native of Winchester, Mr. O'Leary spent his entire life here except for five years in California. He was a veteran member of the Friendship Fire Company. Mr. O'Leary was unmarried. He was the last member of his immediate family.

3,000, Hundreds of Pretty Girls, in Roanoke Fete

With 3,000 characters in the cast, including 300 Indians, a beauty contest and other features, the festival is expected to attract tens of thousands of visitors from all over the State. Above, upper left, are Richard Owen, jr., and Mrs. Mortimer Williams, of Roanoke, all dressed up as Gen. and Mrs. Russell, who were prominent in the early settlement. Right—F. C. Wiley takes the part of Col. James Patton.

Body of Slain Woman Taken To Roanoke

Kent Ends Hunger Strike; U. S. Agent Tracing Telegram.

Roanoke, Va., July 3 (AP).—The investigation into the murder of Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, Blue Ridge resort hotel owner, was spurred tonight with the return of the body to this city, where Maj. Robert Kent, member of a distinguished Virginia family, is held in a jail cell in connection with her murder.

Mrs. Hastings' body was identified just before it was to be lowered into a pauper's grave at Stroudsburg, Pa. The body was found alongside a highway near Stroudsburg Wednesday morning.

Kent, who was assistant judge advocate of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War, and who has maintained his innocence vociferously, broke his three-day fast today and breakfasted on a large portion of ham and eggs.

The Army officer, grandson of a former lieutenant governor of Virginia, was visited today by his third wife, Mrs. Teresa Caspary Kent, of Glenham, N. Y., who has been at Wytheville, Va., since his incarceration.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Mrs. Hastings.

Federal investigators secluded themselves today, but it was learned they were hard at work developing clews in connection with the death of Mrs. Hastings, who left the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel, which she managed in company with Maj. Kent, a former proprietor of the resort, and was not heard from again until her body was found.

T. D. Zimmerman, Botetourt County deputy sheriff, said he was visited late yesterday by J. E. Schoales, Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, who swore out the warrant for Kent under the new kidnaping law. One object of the investigator's search is to trace a telegram received at the hotel last week, directing that Charles Stewart, Mrs. Hastings' colored aid, turn over the property to Kent.

Gov. Peery Cancels 4th Engagements

Sick Nearly a Week, but Is Much Improved.

Richmond, July 3 (Spl.).—The continued illness of Gov. Peery has made it necessary for his secretary to cancel scheduled trips of the chief executive to South Boston, Alta Vista and Roanoke tomorrow for anniversary and Fourth of July celebrations.

The Governor has been confined to the mansion since Wednesday, when he first noted the effects of sickness, believed to have been caused by a combination of crab meat and milk.

His condition is much improved, however.

Dr. C. H. Conley To "Bomb" State With Pamphlets

Motive Sought For Slaying on Virginia Farm

Authorities Are Unable to Find Man Said to Have Admitted Killing.

Leesburg, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—The motive for the killing of Basil Brown, 40, disabled war veteran, whose hacked and beaten body was found in a ravine on the farm of Richard D. Cooper, near Lucketts yesterday morning, has not been determined, according to Loudoun County authorities who were investigating the crime today. Several theories have been advanced, including robbery, grudge, an altercation, or a woman.

It has been learned that Brown, who received a pension from the Government on account of disability due to being gassed in the war, had not received his pension for this month.

Sheriff E. S. Adrian and his deputies, investigating the scene of the crime this morning, talked with Richard Cooper and his wife. Authorities have not been able to locate Clarence Barnhouse, stepfather of Mrs. Cooper, who was with the Coppers at their residence on the night of the tragedy and who, Mrs. Cooper said, admitted to her he had killed Brown. Authorities also are searching for another person who was at the Cooper residence Sunday night.

Brown, who was divorced from his wife, and who lived about two miles from the home of the Coopers, is said to have been with Barnhouse and several others at a drinking party at the Cooper residence on Sunday night.

Brown's body lies at a local undertaking establishment awaiting for relatives to arrive to make arrangements for his funeral. It is said he has two sisters living in Washington, and two brothers, Arthur and Paul, in this county.

Patient Recaptured For State Hospital

Deputies Search Vainly for Man With Shotgun.

Annapolis, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—At large from Spring Grove State Hospital for several days, Raymond Carr, 24, third district, was recaptured last night and returned to the institution.

Carr was reported armed with a shotgun and ammunition, and deputy sheriffs beat the woods and brush in vicinity of his home without result.

It later developed that he went to the home of a neighbor, Edward Daniels. The latter disarmed him and notified Sheriff R. Glenn Prout.

Last night Deputies James G. Blackwell and Paul Stinchcomb went to the Daniels home and took Carr into custody.

Young People Of Methodist Church Meet

More Than 450 From the Baltimore Conference Are at Massanetta.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—Methodist young people from all parts of the Baltimore Conference assembled last night at the Massanetta Springs Summer Bible Encampment for their twentieth annual meeting and heard Dr. N. B. Harmon, jr., of Roanoke, give the keynote sermon on the conference theme, "Dare We Be Christian."

More than 450 young men and women from the District of Columbia, Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia were welcomed by Charles S. Jarvis, conference president. The response was given by Miss Virginia Reece, Moorefield District director. The night's program concluded with a lawn social by Mark Cown, of Roanoke, recreational director, and the candlelight prayer service led by the Rev. Frank A. Settle, of Newport News.

The Methodist young people arrived on the heels of the departing Presbyterian young men and women who had the first week at Massanetta. This group of 500 reelected as their president Theodoric Roberts, of Chase City, Va. Henry Amole, of Baltimore, was chosen vice president, and Miss Mary Watt Ayler, of Norfolk, secretary.

Must Use in Later Life.

As a parting word, Dr. Edgar C. Gannon, of Charlotte, N. C., advised them that the religious training they receive in their youth must be carried out in every phase of after life, whether busines, social or political. He warned them not to become wise in their own conceit, but to live to learn. He emphasized that the same set of rules should govern all "compartments of life"—social, political, educational, religious, financial.

Massanetta is a mecca for young peoples' gatherings. After the Methodists come the Lutherans and Baptists. Conference Manager William E. Hudson predicts that 1,800 young people will attend the four conferences, giving Massanetta the largest young peoples attendance of any Bible Conference in the South.

The Methodist young people who made themselves at home tonight a few hours after arriving on the scene, will launch into the conference program tomorrow. There will be classes and group meetings in the morning. The afternoon will be devoted to recreation, either on the grounds or at nearby resorts. After supper comes the hillside vesper service, the general meeting, and then the candlelight prayer service.

O'Conor Entry New Puzzle to Maryland Race

Baltimore Prosecutor to Avoid Alliance With Any One Faction.

Baltimore, July 3 (Spl.).—Entry of State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor into the race for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, is regarded as still further complicating the situation in which the party finds itself at the primary election approaches. Mr. O'Conor has contributed to the confusion by failing to announce on which of the four primary tickets he is running for the nomination.

In fact, he made it plain that he is not running on any ticket and he indicated that if he could, he would refrain from joining any ticket. He is merely out for the party's nomination.

Political observers see in this a smart political maneuver. Mr. O'Conor's strength in the city in regarded as great. In the last election he was named State's attorney for a third term by a 100,000 plurality over his Republican opponent. By refusing to ally himself with any faction, he is likely to gather strength from all factions, for the probability is that none of the gubernatorial candidates will name candidate to oppose him.

Other Candidates Notified.

It was learned today that before Mr. O'Conor announced his candidacy, he notified Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Jackson and Senator Millard E. Tydings, manager of the George C. Radcliffe gubernatorial campaign, that he was planning to enter the attorney general race.

There were reports today that if, as the primary election nears, Mr. O'Conor finds it necessary to ally himself with a party faction, he will pick Gov. Ritchie's ticket as the one on which to run.

Mr. O'Conor did not notify Dr. Charles E. Conley, the fourth Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, of his intention to run for attorney general, because he is not personally acquainted with Dr. Conley, it was stated today.

Conley to Stay in Race.

Dr. Conley, who has been conducting a quiet campaign, today spiked a rumor that he was contemplating withdrawing from the gubernatorial race. From his home in Frederick today, he said by telephone:

"Stories from various sources that I am considering withdrawing as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination are entirely without foundation in fact, because at no time during the campaign have I had the remotest intention of withdrawing I am in the fight to stay."

From Mayor Jackson's office today came a refusal to the suggestions that he run for the senatorial nomination on the Radcliffe ticket. The mayor's advisers notified Senator Tydings that Mr. Jackson would not consider running on the Radcliffe ticket under any circumstances.

Jackson's Mill Coinage Bill's Defeat Lamented

Weston, W. Va., July 3 (Spl.).—Keen disappointment was expressed today when it was learned that the Jackson's Mill memorial coin bill, passed by Congress, had been vetoed.

The movement to coin 50,000 half-dollars, to be sold at $1, to commemorate the boyhood home of Gen. Stonewall Jackson appears to have been in the interest of a private enterprise, as the proceeds were to be used to improve an airport at Jackson's Mill. Gov. H. C. Kump had appointed five commissioners to handle the coins and administer the fund.

Rites Held for Mrs. Whitefield.

Westernport, Md. July 3 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Mrs. Mamie Whitefield, widow of Cambridge Whitefield, and daughter of the late Henry Fresh, Loaconing.

Man's Wooden Leg Is Broken in Fight, But He Goes to Jail

Shepherdstown, W. Va., July 3 (Spl.).—Cecil Williams, a one-legged man here, caused a great deal of excitement yesterday.

He imbibed of the spirits a little too freely and upon his arrival home became very displeased. He cleared the house of all food by throwing it out of the window and then attacked his wife and beat her severely. During the course of the melee he received a broken leg (his wooden leg). He was later arrested and while on his way to the town lock-up his fighting instinct was again aroused and he proceeded to pummel the officer making the arrest.

He was tried before Justice C. E. Jones and received a total of 100 days, 60 days on the wife-beating charge, 30 days for resisting arrest and 10 days for using profane and abusive language, to be served in the Jefferson County Jail, Charles Town. Williams declares that he will sue the county for damages to his wooden leg.

Tubize Strike Leaders Invite Peace Terms

Plant Manager Rejects Conciliation Move at Hopewell.

Hopewell, Va., July 3 (AP).—While the plant management hurled charges of "anarchy" and attempted property destruction, leaders of the striking Tubize Chatillon Corporation employes said today they were willing to accept any peace plan put forward by Federal conciliators.

Raymond S. Burrows, manager of the plant whose 1,900 employes were made idle by the strike, said, however, that he was not ready to talk conciliation.

"With all of this anarchy and threats of destruction to plant property as well as to homes of individuals, attacks on loyal employes and members of their families and even their homes—under such conditions," he said, "it is no time to talk about such things," as conciliation.

Conference Urged.

While Burrows charged union men with attacking, beating and kidnaping members of the party of 50 which removed explosive materials from the plant, George E. Moorehouse, union organizer, urged a conference between plant and labor representatives.

He promised an immediate end of the strike if the Tubize Co. would comply with the ruling of the National Labor Board, which ordered the reinstatement of ten discharged union employes, the inauguration of a stagger system of hours and the establishment of a preferential list of employes.

Burrows, showing no inclination to confer, said that when 50 workers who had entered the plant to remove explosives, left the company property they were attacked and some of them "beaten terribly."

Police Car Attacked.

He pictured a mob of 1,000 men gathering around a house where Corner Hooper, a special officer, had sought refuge, and said that after Hooper had escaped with a police guard, members of the crowd attempted to overturn the police car.

He said that Charles Fox, jr., a worker, had been kidnaped and carried several miles from the city before escaping from the automobile, that Pete Bradshaw had been "beaten up badly," that Clay Jarvis had had to go under police escort to jail for protection and that other members of the 50 had fled the city or sought refuge in the Hopewell Jail.

Gasoline, Rum Taxes Mount

$4,117,585 Collected in Maryland So Far This Year.

Annapolis, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—That Maryland is profiting handsomely from receipts from the 4-cent gasoline tax for roads and revenue from liquor-control legislation, is shown by figures compiled in the State comptroller's office here. Indications are, however, that liquor receipts will not reach the estimate of $1,500,000 anually, made in computing the budget.

Total revenue from these two sources for the first six months of 1934 is $4,117,585.51. Of this amount, $3,514,199.23 is from the gas tax, which is $202,605.11 greater than the corresponding period of 1933. From the $1.10 a gallon liquor tax, receipts were $603,386.28. The grand total from liquor license fees, excise taxes, &c., since the liquor-control law was enacted last December 5 is $808,400.03. Of this sum $665,800.16 was derived from excise tax stamps and $142,599.87 from manufacturers, wholesalers and railroads and steamship lines.

The rush of the liquor traffic naturally was reflected in the first month of the law's operation. Total receipts for December were $205,013.75. Since then the income has fluctuated from a low of $79,765.86 in February to a high of $167,787.93 in May.

Three Robbery Suspects Seized

Hagerstown Series Solved, Police Think.

Hagerstown, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—A series of robberies here are believed by police to have been solved by the arrest today of Samuel Haupt, 38, Franklin County, Pa., on parole from the Pennsylvania Eastern Penitentiary, and Nelson and Paul Mowen, Hagerstown. Haupt is charged with the robbery of the McCardell Bros.' haberdashery here and the Mowens with receiving stolen goods.

Haupt also is being questioned, police said, in connection with the Nicodemus National Bank robbery here some weeks ago. The safe was looted of several hundred dollars. A second attempt to rob the same bank recently was unsuccessful.

Haupt, police said, has been living near Cumberland and has been making frequent trips here.

Crash Injuries Cost Lives of Rockville Boys

Two Youths Are Fatally Hurt When Motorcycle and Auto Collide.

Two Rockville youths died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital as a result of a collision between their motorcycle and the automobile of District Forester C. F. Winslow, at the intersection of Old Georgetown road and Rockville pike.

The youths are George Starkey, 18, son of Joseph N. Starkey, former Montgomery County surveyor, and Rufus E. Milor, jr., 18, son of a Washington real estate dealer.

The boys were riding south on the Rockville pike when they collided with Winslow's car, which was said to have been making a left turn from the Old Georgetown road. Starkey was thrown a considerable distance, but Milor was mashed against the motorcycle.

Firemen Gave Blood.

A woman motorist took young Starkey to the Bethesda Firehouse and the Bethesda Fire Rescue Squad carried him on to the hospital. He died two hours later. Milor was taken to the office of Dr. Murphy, at Rockville, for first aid and then to the hospital by the ambulance of Warner E. Pumphrey. The entire Rockville Rescue Squad followed the ambulance to the hospital in order to stand by for blood transfusions. Francis Lyddane, a fireman, gave blood to the injured boy.

Milor told the firemen while he was being treated that when he saw the crash was inevitable he threw his leg out to break the fall for Starkey. This accounted for the mangling of his leg.

Both Fine Athletes.

Starkey was a junior at Rockville High School and Milor graduated this year. Both boys had won enviable records as athletes, each being a three letter winner.

Funeral services for Starkey will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. from the funeral home of Warner E. Pumphrey at Rockville. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Milor died about 5 a. m. yesterday. The remains were removed to the Colonial Funeral Home at Rockville. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night. The boy's father was found through use of the radio Tuesday night. He was at a business conference in Washington.

More Light.

A special committee of the Disarmament Conference has recommended the so-called "American Plan" for partial control and complete publicity in the private manufacture of arms. A draft text will be sent to each government participating in the conference, and general approval will be sought at next autumn's plenary session. Clearly, this much-tried conference is still far from moribund.

The publicity phases of the proposed plan are its most significant feature. The 1925 convention—to which the Senate has given its "advice and consent," and which awaits Presidential approval—refers exclusively to the private traffic in arms. The convention now put forward applies somewhat similar measures to private arms manufacture. Heretofore, this has been more than private; it has been well nigh secret. The most thorough student could not discover any reliable data regarding either quantities or destinations. The new treaty would place the whole industry, the world over, under a spotlight.

Each signatory government would agree to permit private arms manufacture only upon licenses issued by that government, and would require from each licensee advance notice of the orders he has received. Furthermore, each signatory government would undertake to communicate these details to an International Central Board for publicity purposes.

The "American Plan" may not go so far in the control of the arms traffic as some would like. But it does go a good deal farther than most expected. The question now is whether the various governments will go as far as the committee which has closely studied the proposal at Geneva.

Vindication.

The Fifth Company of the Sixty-third French Infantry had a reputation. They were fighting men. Their officers depended upon them, and because they knew the Fifth would never fail, drove them on. After a particularly bloody encounter, back in 1915, the rest of the regiment went into billets. But the Fifth was ordered back to the front without a chance to sleep or eat. Tired, haggard men, unquestioningly, after the manner of soldiers, they did as they were told. The Germans unleashed a terrific machine gun fire as soon as they were back in the lines.

"The trenches were living hell," said the official report. "The dead from the preceding attack were piled one upon the other."

But war is war. The officers of the Fifth ordered the men over the top. And then something happened. The men did not move. They had reached the limit. They were licked. The ineffable war weariness had struck them. Their minds, their legs, their hands—all refused to obey. In other words: "Cowardice in the presence of the enemy."

Not a very pretty picture. Nineteen years later it doesn't quite make sense. But then it was war. Five of those who had so suddenly been stricken, were chosen by lot to face a firing squad for the collective disobedience. Against the wall they stood and their comrades shot them down.

It is all a sad story. What does it really matter now that these five, after years of litigation by their families, have been vindicated? What is the point in awarding the widows of two of them damages of seven cents?

The whole affair seems so useless. Just another chapter in "All Quiet on the Western Front." A particularly poignant chapter. And the world reads and hurries on. The families have their vindication, the five may have their flowers on Armistice Day, and civilization still has its black eye.

The Inter-American Road.

Few of the many international projects in which the United States is now actively cooperating hold more interest for the average citizen than the Inter-American Highway, for which Congress has appropriated $1,000,000. Mexico and Salvador are already working on segments of the proposed highway. All of the other republics north of the Panama Canal have accepted our offer to assist in the preparation of surveys and plans.

Apparently the project is moving toward consummation, at least so far as Central America is concerned. Completion of the Nuevo Laredo-Mexico City section is expected within the next year. Another highway linking Nogales on the American border to the Mexican capital will soon be undertaken. Ultimately the Inter-American Highway will be extended beyond Panama, to Santiago, Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro.

From several aspects this highway link between the American republics is highly significant. Tourist travel usually results in closer and more sympathetic understanding between those who are thus brought together. Commerce is stimulated by the development of new means of communication. In these days of predominant motor traffic the possibilities of an arterial highway from New York, Chicago and Washington to the nations of the South are far-reaching, indeed. Many a day dream will become practicable.

Just across the border in Mexico is a civilization quite different from ours. Throughout South America are cities, traditions and culture too little known to our people. As with us, Latin-America's main arteries of travel have led across the Atlantic. Of course, the many elements which enter into these Old World associations will not be changed by the Inter-American Highway. Nevertheless, it should be a most important factor in fostering the many mutual interests of the two American continents.

The Opening Gun.

Outlines of the broad issues on which the 1934 Congressional campaign will be fought are now well established. Defense of the New Deal legislation is, of course, the only logical position for the Democratic party to take. On that basis Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, has now issued a direct challenge to the party in power. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the issues, so far as the National campaign is concerned, will be clear-cut, and that the people will have an opportunity to pass judgment after full discussion from both sides.

Mr. Fletcher's candid criticism of the development of President Roosevelt's program is proper political strategy. During the last two sessions of Congress the opposition party has been altogether too lacking in the courage of conviction. Some of its leaders have been inclined to trail along behind the President, apparently in the belief that it is unpopular to oppose him, even when they consider his policies unsound. Obviously, the Republican party can not perform its duty in this way. Fearless and intelligent attack on what its leadership is convinced are unsound measures and dangerous trends is a necessary function of an opposition party.

On the other hand, a weakness of Mr. Fletcher's keynote address must be apparent to all who heard or read it. Criticism of the New Deal is not only its dominant note, but virtually its entire substance. Mr. Fletcher condemns the delegation of "almost unlimited powers" to the President and the "bewildering maze of administrative agencies" built up under the recovery program. But he gives no intimation of what alternative steps the Republican party would recommend if it should be given control of Congress. And opposition which merely opposes can never be really effective.

It may be argued that the minority party does not need to outline a specific program of action, since it could not under any circumstances obtain full control of the Government in the forthcoming elections. Nevertheless, the absence of a constructive opposition program to deal with the grave problems confronting the Nation tends to give mere criticism of the New Deal a hollow sound. It is apparent that the Republican leaders are still face to face with a major dilemma in formulating a positive substitute for the haphazard policies inaugurated by the present Administration. Nor can this handicap be overcome by naive and historically inaccurate comparisons between the issues of 1776 and those of 1934. What the public has the right to expect from opposition spokesmen is specific information on the way they would approach outstanding National problems, if given the authority to assume legislative control in November.

Bargaining With The State.

In protest against Gen. Johnson's dismissal of the head of the union of NRA employes, a handful of "labor sympathizers" have been picketing the Department of Commerce Building. Among the placards are found such slogans as "What About 7a, Johnson?" and "No Company Union in NRA."

The display, of course, is either childish, or exhibitionist, or both. But it has an indirect importance by indicating that there really are some people who fail to recognize the fundamental difference between the position of Government workers and those in private employment. Gen. Johnson himself is a Government employe whose duties are—or should be—defined by law. His power to determine the salaries of subordinates is limited by Congressional appropriations. If the rank and file of Government employes were permitted to descend upon the offices of their superiors and demand the privilege of "collective bargaining" in trade union fashion, orderly government would soon become impossible.

Private employers are not only in a position to negotiate with their employes, but they also know whether their business is sufficiently profitable to permit them to make concessions. Within the limits set by social legislation they may also determine conditions of work and hours of labor. Government departmental heads, however, are part of a great bureaucratic organization where laws, rulings and customary observances severely restrict the discretionary powers of any individual official.

The public disavowal of picketing activities by officers of the Federation of Government Workers shows that union officials realize that the employes of the Government belong in a class apart. Through civil service safeguards or strictly intramural organization they should be able to obtain speedier redress of office grievances, and to bring cases of favoritism and injustice more promptly to the attention of those in authority.

But trade union organization as such has no place in the Government service. Those who think to the contrary only reveal how little consideration they have given both to the nature of the labor problem and to the duties and responsibilities of civil servants, whether patronage or merit appointees.

The state does not bargain with its employes. It commands. The sooner that elemental lesson is learned by those who think that trade unionism can exist under bureaucracy, the nearer we shall be to constructive solution of real industrial problems.

No Room For Argument.

Korekiyo Takahashi, Japan's octogenarian finance minister, is quoted in a copyright dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune as saying that neither the United States nor Great Britain is now financially able to wage a war against Japan. In consequence the finance minister has asked sharp retrenchments in military appropriations which theaten to be the highest in Japanese history.

The statement is to be read in conjunction with the present political crisis in Tokyo, where an unsavory scandal, involving some of Mr. Takahashi's subordinates, threatens repudiation of the Saito Cabinet. Such outcome would not be unwelcome to high military and naval authorities who for some time have been working for the elimination of Premier Saito, regarding his government as too pacific and constitutional. Some of the service elements would like to see a less conciliatory and "stronger" premier in office as next year's scheduled naval conference approaches.

Mr. Takahashi, therefore, is doubtless seeking to strengthen his economy program at home when he tells his people that the financial position of the United States is too precarious to permit a policy of naval expansion. It is, of course, a case of the pot and kettle, for, while Japan is covering a slightly larger proportion of governmental expenditure out of current receipts, the difference in favor of Tokyo in the matter of sound financing is nothing to brag about. And Japanese resources are certainly being much more strained to carry on her present naval building program than is the case with us.

Nevertheless, any argument which tends to discourage naval competition is a good argument, and if Mr. Takahashi prefers to stress the deficit in this country, rather than that in his own, there is no cause for resentment. He is unquestionably right in saying that the United States can not afford to build against Japan. And he would score another truthful bull's-eye by adding that Japan can still less afford to build against the United States.

In Non-Navigable Kansas.

We see by the papers, or to be more exact, by the Leavenworth, Kans., Times, that the fishermen of that State of corn, cyclones and William Allen White are finding that life ain't what it used to be. There was a time, wails this palladium of rustic knowledge, that one could fish any stream one wanted to, how, as and when. But now the State fish and game department has established a regimented bureaucracy or something of that sort, and has issued a long statement filled with overwhelming words, such as riparian rights on non-navigable streams.

We used to think of Kansas as part of the frontier. Now it is just like any other part of the Nation. It is unlawful, by decree of the State's highest court, to fish on private property! This is a far cry from the old times when a fish was a fish and not the property of an individual over whose land the stream runs.

It seems that the whole question came up when some one wanted to know if it was legal to row a boat on a non-navigable stream, surely a weighty question of law for the learned brows of Kansas courts to beetle over. After due consideration, the court has decided that a non-navigable stream is non-navigable and therefore it is illegal to propel a craft upon it. This is all allegedly for the protection of corn, there being much more corn than there are fish in Kansas.

All this is by way of proving that Kansas is coming up to date. A State that once opened its streams to fishermen who fished that they might eat has now declared, in substance, that fishing is a sport for gentlemen farmers who own streams. Kansas is going the way of New England! Pretty soon growing corn will be only a sideline. A National advertising campaign will lure city sports from everywhere to Kansas, summer resort of the West. The cornfields will go fallow. The farmers will turn dude fish ranchers. And the fish will enjoy the more abundant life amid streams with a non-navigability beyond peradventure of constitutional amendment.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN died at his London residence at the age of 78. For 38 years, with a brief interregnum, he represented Birmingham in Parliament. He was the pioneer of tariff reform in Great Britain, and the advocate of imperialism. His death saddened London society.

DARIUS MILLER, president of the Burlington Railroad, declared Kansas farmers would receive more than $100,000,000 for their season's wheat crop, thus insuring prosperity both for the residents and railroads of the State.

JAMES D. BRADLEY, of Philadelphia, prominent horseman, was attacked by a stallion that had thrown him out of the saddle. He was saved from death when Mrs. Clyde E. Eakin, a society woman, charged the animal in her automobile and took Bradley, unconscious, to a doctor. It took eight men two hours to capture the infuriated animal.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

"BIRTHDAY GREETINGS from 20,000 Massachusetts citizens" was the message inscribed on the outside of a letter envelope about 2 feet by 3 feet in size sent to President Coolidge today. The envelope contained a book with the signatures of the 20,000 persons sending the greetings.

ALEXANDER KONTA, Wall street banker, was informed in a letter from Germany that his Berlin bank account of a million or so marks was wiped out. The Dresden Bank of Berlin wrote him the letter, part of which read: "Your total account has been used in part payment for postage on this letter and is now squared, we having paid the difference out of our own pocket."

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Criticism and Explanation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Saturday night Dr. Claudius Murchison, a new addition to the "Brain Trust," and recently appointed Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, exuded some Brain Trust wisdom for the benefit of the Delta Phi Epsilon, a foreign-service fraternity of the Admiral Club. He is reported to have said:

"No one can question for a moment our Government's willingness to accept imports as a trade balance. Investments abroad are held in suspense and this in turn holds in suspense the extension of the bond service. By the conversion of imports into a balancing factor in the international trade problems, the enigmas of international affairs would be hastened toward solution."

I frankly admit that this statement not only bewilders me, but leaves me in a state of intellectual fog through which no ray of comprehending light can penetrate. Maybe I am just too dumb to understand this cryptic statement of the wise man . . . Maybe, Mr. Editor, you can elucidate the meaning of this enigmatical statement for the benefit of your many readers, who are no doubt as much befogged and bewildered by it as I am.

ALEXANDER SIDNEY LANIER.
Washington, June 26.

Editor's note: In order to ascertain whether he had been correctly quoted, the above letter was referred to Dr. Murchison in advance of publication. His reply follows:

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the communication from Mr. Lanier. I myself can scarcely recognize the quotation. On the night of my speech, I was not using a manuscript, and the member of the audience who made the notation, I fear, was not too successful in getting my exact words.

My idea about imports is simply this: We can no longer expect any considerable financing of our export trade to be made through the extension of foreign loans; in consequence, it must be financed to a much greater degree through our purchase of foreign products, preferably noncompetitive items. In other words, under present conditions foreign trade is very close to a barter basis.

Furthermore, if we are to expect any substantial receipts from our foreign investments already made, these receipts must necessarily arise from enlarged exports of the debtor countries. Naturally we must expect to do our part in absorbing a reasonable share of these exports. It seems to me that the matter is one of very simple mathematics. Of course no one supposes that any such reasoning will lead to a policy of unrestricted imports under the new tariff agreements. The purpose of the Government will be to encourage those imports which are really needed in the American markets but which at the same time will produce no shock to the American economic system.

CLAUDIUS T. MURCHISON.

More Trash-Filled Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with considerable interest a letter in The Post of June 28, "Trash-Filled Streets," and wish to add a comment on other streets that need sanitary attention.

During the past few weeks three rain and wind storms have occurred and up to the present time Eighth street southeast, from B to Pennsylvania avenue has not been cleaned. The small limbs, leaves and other trash still lie in the gutter. When will this mess be cleared?

Another disgraceful sight is F street northwest on any Sunday morning and most of the day. Trash of all sorts litters the gutters and sidewalks. Many other streets seem to be in the same filthy condition. Why not have a clean, healthy city—one to be proud of?

A Challenge to the Nation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As we celebrate July Fourth, our Independence Day, let us rally to our country's need, as a patriotic Nation, and resolve to work independently and collectively for the betterment of our social order. It is alarming to read that 80 per cent of all crimes are committed by boys. Despite the fact that we have a well established Government, lawlessness is rampant. It has been said that if the annual crime bill and the annual racketeering bill could be saved one year, our National debt could be wiped out.

Legislators and economists have worked and prescribed, but they alone can not bring about the desired improvement. We need to manifest a zeal in the cultivation of spiritual things and to have a change of heart. President Coolidge said, at one time, that we do not need more laws but more character.

These times are, in a way, a challenge to the Nation. Let us endeavor to demonstrate brotherhood and stress the Old Testament admonition to deal justly, and have mercy and walk humbly with our God. If, as a people, we would be happy we must live in such a manner as to bring happiness.

The following incident has a lesson for us at this time: "When the makers of our Constitution were about to adjourn after four weeks of hopeless groping, Benjamin Franklin rose and reminded the delegates that not once in their deliberations had they turned to God. 'I have lived, sir, a long time,' said he, addressing Washington in the chair, 'and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And, if a sparrow can not fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? I, therefore, beg leave to move that hereafter prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven, and its blessing on our deliberations, be held in the assembly every morning before we proceed to business.'"

From that time on the delegates made successful progress with the Constitution, which had its birth in prayer. May we not be found wanting at this critical time but work together, whatever our creed, in an effort to promote a better social order. Who would dare say what might be accomplished, if we give this matter our serious thought and united effort?

CLARA BOYNTON HADLEY.
Washington, June 27.

Bouquet for Mr. Davis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing for those of your readers and subscribers who are admirers of the Davis portraits which appear in your publication. Last Sunday I was greatly disappointed to find no Davis portraits, and since then they have failed to appear regularly.

Please continue more of the Davis drawings, as they give us great pleasure. Some of us have followed the work of this artist through other papers and, to tell the truth, we became subscribers to The Post when we found his drawings there.

GERTRUDE BOUNIN.
Washington, June 28.

Ed. note: We are glad to say that Mr. Davis' drawings are still a regular feature of The Post.

Monkeys and Men.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent story in The Post about the life of monkey tribes in the Canal Zone leads to interesting reflection on the inferiority of these species and the once more demonstrated superiority of man.

According to Dr. C. B. Carpenter, of Yale, whose report is based upon first-hand studies, life among these primates is not the ruthless struggle that is generally supposed to be their natural state. No individual dominates the group, nor do they engage in physical combat among themselves for food and territory. The old and crippled are not abandoned.

All such pleasing manifestations and proofs of higher intelligence have been developed by that noble creature, man, who has so organized and administered his own social order that a few individuals not only dominate every group but a small percentage of the total population owns a majority of the total wealth, while the remainder battle and claw one another for the pittance that is left. More exactly, they battle one another for "jobs," in which they are paid a pittance for themselves but toil gladly for the privilege of creating more wealth for those who already own nearly all of it.

They have also developed and perfected mass-murder on a colossal scale, known as war, in which they are at all times ready to take part, also for the profit of a few.

In other words, these poor benighted creatures, with their elementary concern for communal welfare instead of the welfare of a privileged few, have not yet become civilized enough to enjoy the many inestimable boons of a rugged individualism under the institution of capitalism.

THERESA RUSSELL.

Picnics.

If you like picnics, you probably won't like this editorial, so skip it.

It's an annual editorial. It is written each summer shortly after the first picnic of the year. It is the expression of never-failing amazement at the American mania for making oneself uncomfortable.

Now, just take a picnic, for example. You take it. We don't want it. But just take it:

You drive out to a picnic ground where there may or may not be water close at hand. That, however, doesn't make much difference unless you forget the lemonade or ice tea. You either place the food upon a table (on which are traces of several scores of previous picnics) or upon a tablecloth upon the ground where ants and chiggers can make themselves thoroughly happy.

You bring with you cold meat and deviled eggs, and sliced or whole tomatoes, which are somewhat tepid; and potato chips and pickles which are in a jar into which the picnickers dip their fingers; and two or three kinds of cake, and bananas and oranges, and paper napkins and perhaps a few knives and forks. The chances are that the meal is all right. It would be all right, also, if eaten in the dining room at home, or out on the back porch.

You either sit on the ground, or on hard benches without any backs, while you eat, after which the women folks, if they are conscientious, gather up all the surplus grub and put it into an incinerator or trash box nearby, if any. If they are not conscientious, they leave everything just as it is, which makes it simply ducky for the next picnic party, or for the owner of the meadow where the picnic is held.

We do not write this editorial with any idea of effecting a reform. If the American people want their picnics," say we, let the American people have them. But this editorial each year fulfills one exemplary purpose. It keeps us from being invited to picnics.

The Post Impressionist

Rocking Plymouth Rock.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

ISN'T it about time that somebody should try to whitewash the Puritans?

By Puritans we don't mean the modern brand. They seem uncannily competent to apply their own paint.

We mean the Pilgrim Fathers of what King Charles I's Colonial Minister called "the Island of New England"—which showed how much he knew of his job's geography. We mean those old boys in gray cloaks and peaked hats and buckled shoes whom the world persistently sketches as strong and silent men, although they were afraid of magic and although they preached three-hour sermons. We mean those demure damsels and morose matrons of whom Joseph Choate nevertheless said that "at the invitation of the Pilgrim Mothers even the peaceful Pilgrim Fathers flew to arms."

Somehow we have a hunch that they are due for an attempt at rehabilitation. The persecution of their tradition has gone almost as far as persecution ever goes. A great deal of history is nothing more than a record of actions leading to inevitable reactions.

For a long time the Puritans had it all their own way. While they endured in the flesh, they dominated New England. Years and years after they themselves had passed to what—we at least hope—was a celestial region of just rewards for them, they, being dead, yet spoke. Their dark mantles grew in size and deepened in color, covering American areas of which the original Mayflowers never dreamed. Their children populated vast territories, dominating their neighbors—and the further the children departed from the Puritan practice the louder they echoed the Puritan precept.

Then came the first reaction, the reaction against them. Some greatly daring soul—wasn't it as early as Mark Twain?—shied a rock at the people from Plymouth Rock and lived to boast of his prowess.

Seeing how safe he was, less daring souls followed his example. Sculptor Joe Davison declared it was a pity the Pilgrim Fathers ever landed on Plymouth Rock, and he added it was more of a pity that Plymouth Rock didn't land on the Pilgrim Fathers. Since then the rain of missiles has been continuous.

In short, the Puritans have at length attained the pleasant position of an oppressed people. Well, oppression always ends by breeding, among the very oppressors, champions for the oppressed.

After all, there are salient points of similarity between our present radicals and those Puritans whom they have delighted to dishonor. These points even our present radicals are capable of discovering—and of approving:

The Puritans were credulous; rightly or wrongly, they believed in witches, and burnt them. The present radicals are credulous; rightly or wrongly, they believe in Freud and persecute anybody who doesn't.

The Puritans dreaded pleasure and were rigid moralists—according to their conceptions of morals. They chopped down Maypoles and forbade flirting. So do the present radicals seek to make pleasure a dull duty and to enforce flirting by fiat. The means are the same, the results not unlike.

Are our present radicals intolerant? Won't they allow free speech to non-radicals? Are they so liberal that they want to extinguish religious liberty by extinguishing religion? But so did the Puritans fight for freedom, for freedom for themselves, for freedom to worship God so much in their own way that there wouldn't be any other way left for anybody else to worship Him.

The fact is that, judged by modern radical standards, the American Puritans were the first American radicals.

Besides all this, a vindication of the Puritan will require qualities and entail effects which essentially appeal to our modern radicals:

It will require courage, the sole old virtue which these potential whitewashers admit to be a virtue. The world will be against this gentleman with brush and bucket, and if there is one thing the radical loves more than another it is a world at enmity with him.

The process will infallibly shock the multitude; the shocked multitude will certainly assault the whitewasher. To shock the multitude that he has educated until it is proof against ordinary shock, the shock-loving modern radical has no method left except counter-shocks—and he measures the value of his assaults by the violence with which he is subsequently assaulted.

Yes, we believe it is arriving.

Winter after next, perhaps next winter, Washington may see the tryout of a drama of the Pilgrim Fathers, culminating in the first Thanksgiving Day dinner that was interrupted by the first enemy Indian arrow—a drama in blank verse by the patriots who wrote "Of Thee I Sing."

The National Symphony Orchestra will play a "Plymouth Rock Symphony," wherein the nasal notes of the Pilgrim Fathers and Mothers will rise to a climax harmonizing the howls of the Pilgrim Children with the crows and cackles of Plymouth Rock roosters and Plymouth Rock hens.

Some sturdy interpreter of Yankeedom like Rivera will exhibit murals showing the coming of the Mayflower—and some sturdy Yankee like Mr. Rockefeller will astoundedly detect the features of Lenin under the helmet of Miles Standish.

After that it will merely remain for The American Mercury to begin serialization of H. L. Mencken's philosophic history of the Puritans, demonstrating the twin facts that these early radicals were only misdirected moderns and that, therefore, the modern radicals are only perverted Puritans.

What Marvels We Are.

ONE can not fully contemplate the Nation's birthday today without being proud of the amazing advance we have made in the conveying of intelligence. Just think, back there in the early days it took months for word of some happening to get over the 13 colonies. Nowadays men's thoughts and actions are spread immediately over all the country so that the people may know.

BARGERON.

There are our modern newspapers, for example. The way in which they disseminate intelligence is a caution. Only yesterday I read a most graphic account of Chairman Eugene O. Sykes' plans for the new Communications Commission. Although I have never seen him, I learned that he is "the tall, quiet-spoken former Mississippi judge" and from that I gathered he is the very man to administer the commission fearlessly and fairly in the interest of the body weal.

• • • •

Some enterprising reporter apparently interviewed Mr. Sykes.

"We have to get organized and work out divisions," said Mr. Sykes. "Then the work will start. My idea is to have the organization as simplified as it is possible to make it, with efficiency as the keynote."

You see, Mr. Sykes is not the whole commission. There are four other members, so he could not say definitely that the organization would be simplified with efficiency as the keynote. He had to give it as just his idea. The other members may be against a simplified organization with efficiency as the keynote and under our democratic form of bureaucracy a majority of a board or commission has to be for something in order for it to be put into effect.

But the point I am trying to make is that 150 years ago it would have been months and months before all the people knew that Mr. Sykes, as one man on the new communications commission, favored a simplified organization with efficiency as the keynote.

• • • •

Down at Charlottesville, Va., learned men are gathered under the auspices of the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs to exchange thoughts. Learned men have been wont to gather and exchange thoughts since the beginning of time, but now the readers of The Post, because of its enterprise in sending Mr. Waltman down there, are able to read of these thoughts the very next morning at the breakfast table. It is sort of like getting in on the exchange.

Thus we get the thought of Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, whom Mr. Waltman describes as an "outspoken historian and publicist," that Mr. Roosevelt is the only hope of saving democracy.

"If our financial leaders," he said, "have an iota of sense, logic or realism, they would see in Mr. Roosevelt their fair-haired boy, and would rally to his program with more loyalty than the profiteers rallied about Woodrow Wilson in 1917-18."

• • • •

"Roosevelt," he continued, "is the last chance of democracy and capitalism in the United States. If the New Deal collapses, we have the stark realities of fascism and then communism staring us in the face. It is the New Deal, castor oil or the firing squad."

In our highly developed system of conveying intelligence I think I have heard this bit of intelligence before. As a matter of fact, someone quoted Mr. Roosevelt, early in his Administration, as saying he would be the "greatest or the last President" but he disavowed the statement. It reflected a lot of conceit, of course.

• • • •

There is something about the learned historian's exchange of thought that interests me, however. It sort of suggests that the New Deal in the rapidity of its movement has passed him by, overlooked him in some way. At least, I haven't heard of his being hereabouts. There he is down there at Charlottesville knocking at the door. He is doing tricks and cutting up and looking every now and then to see if the rest of the party is noticing him.

Sometimes I think we were better off under our much slower way of spreading intelligence 150 years ago.

Danville May Offer Bond Issue Privately

Danville, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—The Public Works Administration has made a concession to the city in the matter of selling bonds to be issued to cover a loan and grant of $103,000 for local improvements.

Under the original ordinance the Government was to buy the bonds. The concession allows the city to sell the bonds privately over par if it can, and City Auditor C. B. Strange says that the present level of the bond market justifies such a hope.

Loudoun Game-Fish Protective Association to Incorporate

Rev. D. C. Mayers Fills Vacancy on Board of Governors.

By Grace B. Popkins.

Leesburg, Va., July 3.—The newly organized Loudoun Game and Fish Protective Association at a meeting here last night ordered incorporation of the association and authorized the officers to apply for a charter. R. T. Corbell read a report on the constitution and by-laws which was adopted.

The purpose of the organization is to protect, conserve and propagate Loudoun County wild game life. The annual meeting to elect officers will be held the first Monday in each November, at which time six of the eighteen directors will be elected. Association members were requested to report to the game warden, Walton Saffer, any violation of the game laws.

H. E. Cole suggested that resolutions of sympathy on the recent death of Dr. S. Taylor Young be offered and a committee, consisting of Mr. Cole, R. T. Corbell and Dr. Herbert Howard, was appointed.

The Rev. D. Campbell Mayers, of Middleburgh, was appointed a member of the board of governors from Mercer District to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Young.

Former Governor Westmoreland Davis, president of the association, presided and T. N. Carruthers acted as secretary in place of Dr. J. E. Clagett, of Hamilton. Informal discussions were held by the 30 or more sportsmen who attended. A meeting at which prominent sportsmen would be invited to speak and a banquet to increase the membership were suggested.

It was decided to hold the next meeting the second Monday in September.

Police arrested Hileman and another man on charges of fighting in the street. The other man named Hileman as the fugitive in the auto fatality case.

A search of police records showed that Hileman's car had killed a colored pedestrian in 1930 and had been involved in three other crashes on the same day. Hileman was held for investigation.

He was a native of Whiteville, N. C., and leaves, besides his wife and son, three brothers and three sisters.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

From the Cool Cloisters.

IS the w. k. end of the world at hand? I haven't in some time seen a dated prophecy by one of those minor sects which every so often announce the Ultimate Day like a train conductor. Repeated disappointment, perhaps, has taken the edge off their conviction—and that at a time when a count of noses might find an astonishing number of us on the believers' bench.

THEO. HALL.

But I'm forgetting an editorial which appeared in a woman's magazine last year. If I had it at hand, I'd quote verbatim. It dwelt, however, pretty thoroughly on the parlous state of the world—the wars and rumors of wars, the ruckus from abroad, the confusion within our borders. It voiced a long, lugubrious wail. Reading it, one thought how exact the observations were, how hopeless was this culmination of man's history.

Underneath, in subtle, small type stood the joker—a foot-note explained that the editorial was a reprint from Harper's Magazine of 1851.

• • • •

Something, apparently, keeps going in this world. The poets have an idea or two about that continuity. Let Hardy speak for a legion:

"Yonder maid and her wight
Come whispering by;
War's annals will fade into night
Ere their story die."

And in the midst of Kipling's imperialistic yawp there sounded a surprising ageless note:

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart."

There remains a third theme of continuity, much beloved by the poets—"My mind to me a kingdom is." If the imp of realism whispers that this kingdom has seldom been successfully divorced from economic security, no matter. We're talking about serenity, however won.

I suppose now and in this country it's a bit too vulnerable to refer to the serene and unworldly academic cloisters. But in England, from the eighties to the twenties, that was comparatively the case. And in the person of a Cambridge don, so wise and yet so light-hearted that he seemed either very old or very young, we have the cloister's best expression.

In a full-length, almost excessively charming biography, E. M. Forster paints a portrait of Goldsworthy Lowe's Dickinson. (Its title the subject's name; Harcourt Brace, $3). A lifelong don of King's College, Dickinson never got very far from its cool, protective shadow. True, he traveled to America (twice—and was thoroughly bored by our lack of ideas), to India and China (the latter seemed his spiritual home—ever after he was fond of wearing a mandarin's cap), and he did noble, if ineffectual work, for the League of Nations. But he dwelt in Plato, Shelley and Goethe; he was one of the few Englishmen who had worked through Plotinus; he remained in the realm of ideas.

How "beloved, affectionate, unselfish, intelligent, witty, charming, inspiring" such a man could be, the author of "A Passage to India" shows us very well. People who did not know him had only his writings to go by and he was not his best as a writer. "The Greek View of Life" (1896) still lives and "Letters of a Chinese Official" (1903), to which William Jennings Bryan, hoodwinked, replied that the writer could never have seen the inside of a Christian home, remains cogent as an Eastern view of Western life. But Dickinson was a man, much like "Copey" Copeland at Harvard, or "Billy" Phelps at Yale, built for close friends. It is into "Goldie's" serene circle, along with Roger Fry and Virginia Woolf and D. H. Robertson and hosts we do not know so well, that this admiring and admirable biography admits us.

• • • •

For hundreds upon hundreds of years the basic materials of such academic serenity have been the classics of Greece and Rome. Our best contemporary collection of these is by long odds the Loeb Classical Library (Putnam, $2.50 each), with Greek or Latin on the left-hand page and a sterling translation on the right. But with 280 volumes already issued, the editors necessarily advance upon works less interesting than those of Aristophanes or Catullus.

Still, of the four volumes just published, you will certainly find entertaining the second and concluding volume of Vitruvius' "De Architectura." This is the storehouse of our information on the architecture and engineering of Augustan Rome. The present book treats of everything from country houses to aqueducts, from water-clocks to battering rams. If you have a mechanical turn of mind, you will enjoy it.

The "Punica" of Silius Italicus (first century Latin poet), a rather artificial epic on the Second Punic War, bears the distinction of being the longest poem in Latin. It is also, though relieved by a few passages of superb narrative, quite the dullest. Two volumes of the Loeb contain the "Punica."

Of the nine volumes of the works of Philo contemplated, the fifth has just been issued. Philo was a First Century Alexandrian philosopher, who wrote in Greek a vast allegorical commentary on the Old Testament. Six verses of Genesis, for example, interpreted through 65 pages of translation (plus two other like sections) may not make the most stimulating reading in the world. But I can think of little else which is so well calculated to disengage you from the fearful portents of Armageddon.

The Once Over

The Inquiring Reporter and the President's Radio Questions.

Q. Are you better off than you were last year?

Emil Plaskas, stock broker: Stop kidding me, will ya? I warned you once.

P. Hedges Zipper, industrial chief: Did he say better or bitter?

• • • •

Q. Are your debts less burdensome?

Jeems Pommock, specialist in first and second mortgages: One more crack like that and out goes my radio!

Charlie Charles, ex-bank director and loser in a $250,000 suit by depositors: Make mine vanilla, with no cream! Huh?

• • • •

Q. Is your bank account more secure?

Mrs. Fred Freemsby, housewife: It is if that old horse collar is still moth-proof.

Chorus of unidentified voices: What bank account?

• • • •

Q. Are your working conditions better?

CWA worker: Well, I'm still working on my original pile of leaves, ain't I?

Bond salesman: So you're looking for trouble, eh? Well, step out in the alley!

A burglar: Baloney. When I go into a house now I lose money.

• • • •

Q. Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?

"Daredevil" Swidge, stunt actor, about to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel: No, but I'll feel better after a few more beers.

Toast.

Hitler must be realizing just about now that up to last week he had been exterminating the wrong people.

Judging from the newspaper accounts, some of those Nazi leaders were half-shot most of the time anyhow, and Der Fuhrer completed the job.

Bill Bonthron, Princeton athlete, ran 1,500 meters in 3 minutes 48.8 seconds, setting a new world record. He is evidently rehearsing to catch one of those streamline trains after reaching the station a little late.

Removal of Wires At Airport Sought

C. of C. Makes Request Following Crash.

Hagerstown, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce is considering asking the C. & P. Telephone Co., to remove wires along the pike bordering the Hagerstown airport, as a result of an airplane crash Sunday. Mark B. Danner, Unionville, Md., aviator, was slightly hurt when his plane struck telephone wires and fell in a field adjacent to the airport as he was trying to land.

The chamber requested the telephone company several years ago to consider placing the wires underground and removing the poles. The cost, then, was estimated at about $800.

The first of the big planes being manufactured at a local airplane plant for the Pan-American Aircraft Co., will soon be given initial tests at the airfield and it is the desire of the chamber to eliminate all hazards. The airfield recently was enlarged by CWA and FWA workers after the city had purchased the airport and additional land.

The National Gallery

ALICE ROOSEVELT LONGWORTH, widow of a former Speaker of the House, daughter of "T. R.," she quietly blocked attempts to steer her to the Senate. Prefers rather the patrician charm of her study where she relives the "Crowded Hours" that enlivened newspaper columns with her activity for three decades. "Princess" by prerogative, dashing debutante by nature, she regaled kings, emperors, ambassadors and mere Congressmen with her sparkling repartee, bubbling wit, and political acumen. Retains abiding charm and zestful personality of her White House days. Ever present at mid-House gallery fanfares, she continues to observe, is never quoted but pens sage pieces for polite prints.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

To Be a Good Roman You Must Live as Romans Do

By Robert Quillen

Specialists and faddists in ever-increasing number advocate diets, baths and exercises to promote and preserve good health.

Perhaps some of their advice is good, but in ordinary cases the preservation of health requires no more than obedience to three simple rules that were known to our fathers.

Man alone spoils his pleasures by gluttony.

The only cigarettes he enjoys to the fullest are the first one in the morning and the first one after meals. Yet he smokes one after another, all the day long, until they begin to taste like fried sole leather and afford no enjoyment at all.

If he enjoys one drink he swallows half a dozen more that serve only to addle his wits and fill him with poison.

He eats so much and so fast that he never savors the full flavor of anything, and much of his food does him more harm than good.

He would find everything more enjoyable if he denied himself and waited for keen desire, and the practice of moderation would enable him to gratify his appetites without a penalty.

The second rule—that of living naturally—is more difficult to follow in an artificial civilization, but it can be done in the measure that health requires.

Animals in a state of nature live much in the open air, but they find shelter in winter and shade in summer. That much is easy to do.

The one further requirement is exercise, and again animals set the example. They play in youth to develop their bodies. Once fully matured, they exert themselves enough to get their food and no more. They take no violent exercise for its own sake, and therefore develop no heart trouble.

The last rule is perhaps most important, for the state of the body is wholly at the mercy of the state of mind.

Anger, fear and anxiety stop digestion and fill the body with poisons.

Avoiding the poison is merely a matter of cultivating the habit of self-control. It is wholly a matter of choice. Whether you indulge in childish outbursts and foolish worries or maintain the calm of a well-poised grown-up, you act of your own free will in full knowledge of the consequences and thus deliberately choose your hurt or reward.

Church Given $2,500 in Will

H.H.Emmert, Martinsburg, Rewards Services of Domestics.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 3 (Spl.).—The sum of $2,500 was left to Trinity Episcopal Church here by the late Attorney Howard H. Emmert, banker, in his will, admitted to probate here yesterday. He was buried last Tuesday.

The will, written June 16, 1930, makes the gift to the church subject to the approval of the widow, who is named executrix.

The law partner of the deceased attorney is given the privilege of buying the office equipment, library and half-interest in the law firm for $500 if exercised within a year.

Other bequests are: $5,000 to a niece, Mrs. Mildred Lawter; $5,000 to a nephew, Donald U. Emmert; the residence property, Bolton Hall, to the widow in fee. She also is given the residue of the estate for her natural life. After that the sum of $10,000 is devised a brother, C. E. Emmert, and the remainder to be divided into sixths to be distributed among the niece and five nephews.

No appraisal of the estate has been filed.

Political Pact Nears in Kent

Beck and Copper Likely to Join Behind County Ticket.

Chestertown, Md., July 3 (Spl.).—A conference is imminent between S. Scott Beck, comptroller of the Port of Baltimore and organization Democratic leader of Kent County, and former State Senator William B. Copper, president of the First National Bank of Chestertown and titular leader of the "antis."

The two are expected to meet this week or next with their district leaders to decide upon candidates for nearly all county offices, subject to the coming primary election, in order to avoid a bitter primary battle such as has marked the history of Democratic politics in Kent County for many years.

Since eight candidates for sheriff already have announced themselves, it is believed a contest will be waged for that office and that no effort will be made to bring out a compromise candidate such as would be agreed upon for other offices.

It is uncertain which State ticket the two factions will support. Former State Senator Beck, a close personal friend of Gov. Ritchie, received his Federad post at the Port of Baltimore through the efforts, it is said, of Senator Millard E. Tydings. With Tydings supporting George L. Radcliffe, PWA administrator for Maryland, Mr. Beck's position is not clear.

Though Harrison W. Vickers, former State conservation commissioner and one of the "anti" leaders, broke with Gov. Ritchie a number of years ago, it is believed not improbable the Copper faction may line up back of the Governor.

It is known, however, that both local factions will support Associate Judge Thomas J. Keating for chief judge of the circuit embracing Cecil, Kent, Caroline, Queen Anne and Talbot Counties, to succeed Chief Judge William H. Adkins, whose term expires this year.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Fourth of July.

No nation in the history of the world has ever had such a group of men of genius at its cradle as the United States of America. George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, John Adams, would have been distinguished statesmen in any country or at any time. Washington and Hamilton did not sign the Declaration of Independence, as they were with the army.

At the beginning of the year 1776 no one would have believed that the colonies were to separate from the mother country. It was liberty and not independence which the colonists wanted, and for which they were fighting.

But on April 12, 1776, North Carolina authorized its delegates to work for independence; and on May 15 Virginia instructed its delegates with that end in view. On June 7, therefore, in Congress, Richard Henry Lee moved that the colonies ought to be independent States. The motion was seconded by John Adams, of Massachusetts. A committee was appointed, consisting of Jefferson, Adams, Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston. Jefferson was authorized to draft the document. On July 2 Congress voted for independence, and the Declaration was adopted on July 4. New York did not vote until July 9, but came in unanimously some days later. No signatures were attached on the Fourth; most of the men signed on August 2, though not all.

For over 100 years after the Declaration was adopted it had no home. Prof. Philbrick, in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, says "it found shelter in ten cities and five States, twice narrowly escaped destruction by fire, and in both the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812 was nearly captured by the British. In 1894 . . . the document was placed in a safe in the State Department library. Finally, in 1921, it was removed to the Library of Congress, where it is on permanent exhibition in a shrine specially constructed for its preservation."

It is one of the greatest of American state papers, and although it is not true that all men are created equal, what is meant by that phrase ought to be true, namely, that all men should have equality of opportunity so far as the law of the land can provide it.

The Declaration of Independence is a document of the eighteenth century, and although it was written by a man of genius, it bears the marks in thought and style of its epoch. Jean Jacques Rousseau may be heard in many of the phrases. And the Declaration itself had an enormous effect on the ideas and on the events that were to follow, and its influence has by no means yet become extinct.

Diplomats Come Home For Summer

Morrises Arrive From Belgium; Ministers Plan Visits.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Just as foreign diplomats in this country return to their native homes in great numbers each summer for a few weeks or a few months of vacation, so do American diplomats come from all parts of the world to spend their leaves of absence at home. And while they are in this country each and every one pays a visit to Washington and the State Department before departing for their homes or summering places.

Capital society, or what remains of it in town during these summer months, always welcomes the homecomers, for most of them, at one time or another, have been at the State Department, and have many friends here.

The United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Jesse Isador Straus arrived in New York yesterday aboard the Ile de France, and will pass the summer at their country place at Mount Kisco, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Straus probably will visit Washington some time during their stay in this country, but since they are close friends of the President, presumably their visit will not be until after the return of the Chief Executive. When the ambassador and his wife were in town last winter they were entertained at the White House. Accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Straus was the former's brother, Mr. Percy S. Straus.

Dearings to Return.

The Ambassador to Peru and Mrs. Fred Morris Dearing will arrive in this country next week to begin a six months' leave of absence. Mr. and Mrs. Dearing will stop in Washington only briefly, as they are planning to include a trip to Europe in their holiday.

The Dearings have been associated with Washington for a long time, Mr. Dearing having received his master's degree in diplomacy at George Washington University years ago when it was still the Columbian University. In 1921 Mr. Dearing served as Assistant Secretary of State, and later was United States Minister to Portugal.

The Ambassador to Belgium and Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris have been in this country for several days, having lingered in Europe until after their daughter, Miss Alice Morris, was presented at the Court of St. James. They are now at their summer home, Bogue Chitto, at Bar Harbor, where the Ambassador, who is an ardent yachtsman, will spend much of his vacation time cruising on his schooner yacht, Isabel.

Mrs. Owen Plans Visit.

Later in the season Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, will come to this country, probably traveling with her new son-in-law, Mr. Robert Lehmann, who with his bride, the former Mrs. Owen Meeker, is now en route to Denmark to visit the latter's distinguished mother. They plan to return together the end of the summer, and the popular Mrs. Owen will not miss Washington during her visit.

Mr. Ralph Totten, Minister to the Union of South Africa, will shortly begin the long trip from the tip of the Dark Continent to New York, and will renew acquaintances in the Capital for the first time since his appointment several years ago.

Mr. Edward Albright will leave his post as Minister to Finland in September just long enough to pay a short visit to this country.

Culbertson on Bridge

Two Lessons in Play.

In today's hand there are two obvious lessons—one for the Declarer involving an important principle in the play of the Dummy, and the second an important principle in defense—abandoning the long suit in a hand which lacks entries and seeking to find a vulnerable spot in the opponents' armor. The hand was played in a team-of-four match in the City of Brookline, the scoring being on the basis of total points. This type of game lends itself to practically the same degree of daring as does Rubber Bridge—in other words, the risk of a slight loss is fully justified if there is an even or nearly even chance to score a game. That is why North and South were so daring in the bidding. As a matter of fact, they did have a game in the hand, but it was in the despised minor suit, clubs, where all but two tricks were essential, and both North and South feared they might lose more.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 3 ♡ K Q 8 6 ◇ Q J 4 ♣ Q J 10 7 3
♠ K Q J 8 7 5 ♡ J 5 3 2 ◇ 5 3 ♣ K	N W E S	♠ 10 9 2 ♡ A 10 9 4 ◇ A 7 6 2 ♣ 6 5

East	South	West	North
Pass	1♣(1)	Pass(2)	1♡
Pass	1NT	Pass(3)	3♣(4)
Pass	3NT(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A very light bid.
2—West, with both majors well represented in his hand, hopes that South will eventually play at three notrump and that the club King will be the entry for the spades.
3—So far, so good.
4—Begging for a game.
5—Accepting the invitation. The absence of a spade Overcall seems to make the hand playable at notrump.

West opened the spade King, confidently counting, when he saw the Dummy, on his singleton club King's proving an entry. South held off until the third round and discarded two clubs from Dummy on the second and third leads of spades. East's play on the spade suit had been the nine, the ten and the deuce, clearly marking him with three spades. South, who had regarded his contract as unmakable, now saw a glimmer of chance that he might fulfill it. He reasoned that if West had held a six-card spade suit and the Ace of either hearts or diamonds, he would have overcalled. Hence East must hold both of these important cards. If West held the guarded King of clubs, game was impossible in any event, whereas with East holding it guarded, the worst that could happen, if his card reading was correct, was a set of one trick.

Thus reasoning, South, who had been careful to unblock in Dummy in the club suit, laid down the Ace, and when West's singleton King dropped, ran off five club tricks, low hearts being discarded in the Dummy. Now South followed with a diamond, and the contract could no longer be defeated.

The Declarer made his ambitious contract by accurate card reading and accurate play. As a matter of fact, West should have overcalled with one spade with his six-card suit, as the pass for a swing with this type of hand is too dangerous.

The defensive lesson on this hand is that if West had led a heart after he had cashed two rounds of spades, the contract could not possibly have been made as in that case the factor of time would have worked in favor of the defense rather than the Declarer and tricks would have been established in the hand which held certain entry.

Slouch Grows Old Fashioned as Women Realize Good Posture Part of Personality

Speakers Say Marriage Needs More Than Love

All of Them at Marriage and Family Relations Conference Agree on This Point and That's About All.

IT TAKES a heap more than love to make a happy marriage.

Speakers at the Marriage and Family Relations Conference, which came to an end in New York yesterday, were agreed on that one point. But after that was amicably settled, opinions of the educators, social workers, public health experts and clergymen flew off in as many directions as gleaming balls from a Roman candle.

"Courses on marriage and sex life should be introduced into every senior high school in the country," declared Dr. Maurice A. Bigelow, director of the School of Practical Arts, Teachers College, Columbia University.

"I fully believe in premarital courses for men and women, both inside and outside high school and college," he continued as he elaborated upon his sex education plan. "I have read letters from thousands of persons who stated they had benefited by premarital instructions."

The opposite view was taken by Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina and teacher of the world's first college class in marriage.

Sex is comparatively unimportant in marriage, believes Dr. Groves, so why advocate increased dissemination of sex information?

Can Learn Quickly.

"All you have to know about sex is sex technique and that can be learned in 15 minutes," said the professor, who has been instructing a class in marriage since 1925.

In the face of Dr. Groves' statement concerning the unimportance of sex in marriage, Dr. Bigelow declared one-third of all divorce cases originated in lack of medical knowledge and that thousands of these divorces could be avoided each year by proper instruction.

Too much emphasis is placed on romantic love, in the opinion of Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the California Institute of Family Relations.

"Love is not enough for a happy marriage," he explained. "People need more than that to get along together. The main thing is for two persons to have the same goal. Years ago husband and wives had so many responsibilities and aims in common that marriage was welded with a variety of goals and interests which resulted in a sturdy sort of love."

But today marriage is usually stripped of all interests except affection, Dr. Popenoe has decided after interviewing more than 12,000 persons who were unhappily married.

"If emotional love is all to be expected in marriage, than either the man or the woman would have a right to break the bond and seek another mate who promised more affection," he said.

Husbands, as a rule are more intelligent than wives, Dr. Popenoe is convinced.

But Limited Evidence.

"There is statistical evidence to support the contention that the average man has a higher intelligence quotient than the average woman," he said. He added however, the evidence is of a limited nature.

Some men are most contented and happy when their wives are managing them and telling them what to do, according to Dr. Popenoe.

"A scientist, immersed in his experiments and research, can be happy with a woman who manages him. So can an artist. It relieves him of responsibility."

But martial fireworks are almost sure to fly when two dominating persons wed.

"And I don't know anything more pathetic than a couple of clinging vines trying to make a go of marriage," Dr. Popenoe concluded.

Although Dr. Groves did not dispute Dr. Popenoe's statement concerning the higher intelligence of husbands, he did declare college women make the best wives.

"But college girls should marry college men," he counseled. "Educated women want intellectual companionship. That is why they should marry educated men."

Study Prospective's Habits.

Dr. Elsa B. Grove, lecturer at Teachers College, advised young women to observe the habits of their prospective husbands. From the cleanliness of a man's bathtub and the neatness of his wardrobe it is easy to form a fairly definite idea of his character, she believes. Dr. Grove also cautioned young men to learn before marriage something of the habits of their prospective wives.

Dr. Benjamin R. Andrews' contribution to the conference was the suggestion that happily married men and women be engaged as lecturers on marriage.

"We have practicing doctors in medical courses, engineers in engineering courses, lawyers in law courses. Why not experts on marriage in marriage courses?" he asked.

Adult Training Leaders Speak Today to Meet

Soroptimist Clubs to Elect Officers, Install Them at Banquet.

FOUR women, leaders in the adult education field, will lead the discussion at the annual meeting of the department of adult education of the National Education Association at 2 o'clock today in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A.

They will be Miss Maude E. Alton, principal, Americanization work, Webster School, Washington; Miss Katherine M. Kohler, director, extension division, Board of Education, Minneapolis, Minn.; Miss Frances Wetmore, supervisor of adult education, Board of Education, Chicago; Miss Elizabeth A. Woodward, supervisor, adult education, Board of Education, New York.

• • • •

"Problems of Federal Emergency Relief Administration" will be discussed by L. R. Alderman, chief, Service Division, U. S. Office of Education. Miss Caroline A. Whipple, supervisor of adult education, State Department of Education, Albany, N. Y., will speak on "Some Observations on Adult Education."

• • • •

Following are some of the suggested questions for discussion: What can private organizations and individuals do to help local school authorities in dealing with these emergency situations? How should we try to make a more satisfying personal and community life adjustment? How may each locality be led to increase interest in and develop adequate facilities for study and discussion of public affairs?

Soroptimists to Elect.

THE American Federation of Soroptomist Clubs will elect officers today at its convention, which is being held in Baltimore.

Among those who have been nominated for president are Miss Eloise Cushing, of Oakland, Calif.; Miss Alice Steele, of Missouri; Miss Mary Catherine Lewis, of Washington, and Mrs. Anne Smith, of Philadelphia.

The Ladies' Aid of Colesville, Md., will hold its annual chicken supper at 5 o'clock tonight in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Hall, Colesville.

Queen Elizabeth Good Model For Regal, Graceful Carriage

Washington Dancer Dismayed Over Bearing of American Women; Says She Can Tell Them Abroad by Their Distressing Slumps.

What is personality? What is charm? Is it any one thing? Or a number of things?

This is the third article in a series discussing the constituents of personality, and throwing a modern light on how they may be cultivated.

By Frances Mangum.

STYLE, steel-fisted dictator of all times, has decreed the return of good posture. Slouches, slumps, and humps have gone the way of all flesh.

Droopy debs, who for the last few years have slinked and slithered their way through ballrooms and rotogravure sections, are called upon by swishing trains and low backs to stand and walk like Junos.

For posture this July, 1934, is a great portrayer—or betrayer—of personality.

And so it was 400 years ago in the time of good Queen Bess. Elizabeth herself was a homely woman with manners as coarse as a coachman, but she carried herself in regal fashion.

She is no model for modern women in other than this. At a dinner party today she would shock even the merriest with the vehemence of her oaths. She would be up against a frigid-faced headwaiter's icy stare when she gnawed at a whole roast beef, or gulped a flagon of ale. But she would shame dowagers and debutantes, women of high and low degree, by her aristocratic carriage and admirable posture.

Knows Them by Slouch.

Miss Lisa Gardiner, Washington dancer, held up her graceful hands in a classic gesture of dismay when she spoke of the posture of American women.

"In Europe they say Americans can always be spotted by their loudness. I don't know," she said, "I always found it was posible to tell an American woman or girl by her slouch.

"There has been in recent years a great deal of talk about the debutante slouch. In my opinion, it is the debutante collapse."

Miss Gardiner insists there is no earthly reason for any girl not carrying herself gracefully.

"She has only to do one thing," said the graceful young dancer, rising from her seat in the window and following the bent of her words. "She has only to stand tall, to hitch her chest to a star"

She explained if one followed this simple rule it would be impossible to hump the shoulders, to stick out the stomach or commit other prevalent posture crimes.

Startling Theory.

When Mr. Phil Hayden, instructor of dancing and gymnastics, was consulted on the subject, he advanced a startling theory.

"I hold," said Mr. Hayden, "that pigeon-toed persons never fail to carry themselves well. Consequently I'm an advocate of pigeon-toedism.

"Now I don't mean a woman should walk like this," Mr. Hayden unwound himself from the arms of a modernistic chair and demonstrated pigeon-toedism in its last extremity. "But," he continued, "that is better than this:" And he outdid Charlie Chaplin by 10 degrees.

"I would advise a woman if she wants to walk well—and few of them do, I'd gather, from the way they walk these days—to practice toes slightly in. Gradually she will naturally acquire a straightforward tread. With this she will gain good balance and a slight spring, essentials of good carriage.

Mr. Hayden admitted good carriage, graceful and correct posture were frequently mentioned as attributes of aristocracy. If women wish to create the impression they are the blue-blooded daughters of Eve or the Mayflower, they can find no more convincing manner than by telling the world by the way they walk.

Some Exercises.

Mr. Hayden, being practical as well as practiced in the art of physical culture, outlined a few simple exercises which women can perform in their boudoir.

He suggested strengthening the feet by walking first on the outside of them around the room. Twice if possible. Then change and walk on the inside.

"It sounds simple. In fact, it sounds a bit sappy," said Mr. Hayden, "but it's a marvelous exercise and gets results. When the feet are strong, the walk is apt to improve 100 per cent."

Mr. Hayden, despite his youth, and flare for modernism as apparent in the black and chrome furnishings in his studio, maintains the old exercises of walking and balancing a book on the head and sleeping without a pillow are still splendid practices for posture and carriage.

And furthermore," he said, "there is nothing better than a good, strong, hearty stretch every morning and every night!"

Both Mr. Hayden and Miss Gardiner agreed that women should take care to vary the kind of shoes they wear.

Sometimes it should be oxfords, with flat soles, sometimes sport slippers with Cuban heels, other times shoes with the high French heels, to be sure the muscles in the feet and legs do not become too set.

Poetical Reply.

Miss Ruby F. Neal, director of the physical culture department at Marjorie Webster School, was interviewed in the middle of "posture week" on the campus. Consequently, she was able to answer questions forcefully, motto-ly, and even poetically.

In reply to what she thought about the posture situation in America she pointed to a placard on the wall and quoted:

"We see the folks around us
All slumped down in a heap,
And the way that people navigate
Is enough to make you weep."

Just what they could do about it was another easy one. Again the placard, and again a quote:

"Get uplift in your bearing,
And strength and spring and vim;
No matter what your worries are
To slouch won't alter them."

"Posture is personality," declared Miss Neal, pointing to another poster. "You can tell by watching the way a woman walks and stands just about what kind of person she is.

"Take the frightened mouselike type, for instance. She shrinks into the room and slumps into a chair as though she were afraid of everyone.

"Her direct opposite, the masterful woman, clumps in and flops down. Flighty, lightheaded women flutter and perch. But the natural girl, the one with poise—and poisonality," she smiled, "walks with her head up, chest out, keenly alive and enthusiastic, and sits in a chair with the grace of a child."

Miss Neal said a woman's carriage usually revealed her profession. Secretaries and stenographers, she said, were prone to be round shouldered because they formed the habit of sitting that way at a typewriter. They could prevent this, she pointed out, by cultivating the habit of sitting erect, by getting up and walking around the desk when they began to slump.

Exercise Is Good.

"It isn't easy to form the habit," she admitted. "But if these girls would conscientiously keep at it, they would find it just as easy and more restful to sit up, as to slouch down.

"The best way to cultivate grace in carriage and correct posture is to take exercise, to cultivate a hobby of swimming, tennis, golf. "It doesn't sound very new, but it's just one of those important things that never really grow old."

Poets have often pointed out that youth is a time of reaching upward toward the sky, and age of bending toward the earth.

If this were kept in mind and more effort spent on holding upward toward the heavens, old age might be staved off for many a long year.

Mrs. Harrison Williams has been voted the most stylish woman in the world. Was she born with this attribute? Or did she acquire it? Read in tomorrow's Post in the fourth article of this series what style is and how to develop it.

Mental Health Held Requisite For Educator

Recreation, Exercises Need of Deans, Proclaims Prominent One.

TEACHERS and deans must themselves be mentally healthy before they can talk of inspiring mental health in their students, Dr. Dorothy Stratton, dean of women of Purdue University, told members of the National Association of Deans of Women at their luncheon and panel discussion at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday.

Dr. Stratton, one of a group of prominent educators who discussed "Problems of the High School Dean," urged deans and teachers to reduce mental strain both in their own environment and that of students.

"The dean who works overtime, refuses to take exercise and recreation because she has not the time, is likely to make some mistake in judgment that will affect the whole life of one of her students," she pointed out. "A harassed, exhausted nervous dean is in no condition to work with students.

Uncover the Problem.

"When dealing with problems of mental health with students, the dean should remember the first and most important step is getting the problem out in the open and discussing it," she said. "When that is done the problem is half solved."

Miss Alida C. Bowler, head of the delinquency unit of the Children's Bureau, in discussing "Adjusting Individual Personality and Behavior Problems" emphasized the importance of attitude.

"Deans should not only be interested in the problems of the individual student," she declared, "they should be sympathetic and understanding, entirely unprejudiced. They must want to help the girls. If they are averse to handling problems, are uninterested, the girls will feel it and will not make confidences.

"The dean must not think dealing with the child alone is sufficient when working with problems of maladjustment. It is necessary to go back into the child's home, to meet and know her parents, to understand why she reacts in the way she does. Often it is necessary to make the first adjustment in the home.

Yen for the Bad Ones.

"And the dean who works with girls must like all girls. She must have a yen for the bad ones as well as the good ones."

Miss Anna Halberg, of the Wilson Teachers' College, spoke on the importance of physical health. She suggested three ways of improving the health of students, by teaching them the value of good health habits, by encouraging intelligent use of modern sanitary equipment, and by knowledge of the public health opportunities.

"Get in touch with the organizations that develop community spirit," Miss Edna Reitz, of the Wilkinsburg, Pa., High School, advised the deans, and gave instances where cooperation with the Parent Teacher Association and the women's clubs had made a better community for growing boys and girls.

Miss Elizabeth Oakes discussed problems of educational and vocational guidance in the high schools.

Mrs. Meta Steinhausen, of the Washington Junior High School, Rochester, New York, led the discussion.

Adult Training Is Called College Graduates' Need

Sometimes More Than Illiterates, Cultured Persons Have a Special Need for Education in Later Life, Says Webster Principle.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

COLLEGE graduates are often as much in need of certain phases of adult education as the underprivileged person who has never been to school and does not know how to read and write.

Adult education, is, in fact, for every person who is faced with problems he can not solve readily. It is for every person who seeks development and desires to keep apace of current changes.

So believes Miss Maude Aiton, administrative principal of the Webster School, the Americanization institution of Washington, who has watched organized adult education expand in enrollment and scope each year since its beginning in 1917.

Miss Aiton is chairman of the program committee for the adult education group of the National Education Association now in session.

More Than Three R's.

"Many persons have the idea adult education is only for the individual who has never had the opportunity to learn such fundamentals as reading and writing," Miss Aiton said yesterday. "But it is infinitely more inclusive than that. For while adults who do not know how to read and write should certainly be given an opportunity to learn these things, so should they be guided toward solutions for such problems as social adjustment, how to make homes more attractive and how to clothe children properly."

Such guidance is offered through many channels at the Webster School. There is, for instance, a nursery where mothers may leave their children during class periods and where mothers may learn many things to be applied in their homes. There are classes in dressmaking and other domestic subjects. And there are, among other subjects, several classes in which foreign-born pupils learn to speak English.

Miss Aiton, asked to discuss teaching methods used in these classes, replied:

"We don't use the word 'teach' at all," she explained, "because we really don't teach. We simply try to help adults work out their problems through the discussion method. We give all pupils opportunities to let us know what they need, whether it is a course in child training, home decorating, or what not. Then we help them formulate methods of meeting those needs."

Miss Aiton mentioned that new methods of helping adults were being widely discussed in the sessions of the adult education group of the National Education Association.

"I have been impressed with the fact that we no longer need be concerned with problems formerly confronting those interested in adult education," she said. "We no longer have to convince people that courses for grown-ups are worth-while projects. Our problem now is to make such courses of highest practical value to all who enter our schools and to make our classes inviting to those who need our help and guidance."

Miss Aiton has been interested in helping adults since 1914, when she began visiting courts in the District to become acquainted with the needs of foreign-born persons who must become accustomed to the customs of a strange land. At that time she was a kindergarten teacher, but three years later she was beginning classes for adults, having at first only one pupil. At the same time Miss Mabel Benson started evening classes for adults.

Classes Night and Day.

In order to reach others, Miss Aiton eventually inaugurated a new type of work among the foreign born, consisting of visiting homes of foreign men who were away at war. After doing this work for a summer she was made director of the Americanization, or Webster School, when it became a part of the District school system.

Now, with day and night classes running both winter and summer, more than 15 subjects are offered at the Webster School, including such practical subjects as parental guidance, dressmaking and home decoration, as well as so-called fundamentals. With over 50 nationalities represented, and men and women from 90 occupations, as well as those from the ranks of the unemployed, students from 16 to over 70 were enrolled the past session. The average age of those attending the Webster School is about 35, although there are a number younger than this, and many older.

COLLEGE GRADUATES and underprivileged individuals alike may benefit from adult education, thinks Miss Maude Aiton, above. She is administrative principal of the Webster School, and member of the adult education committee of the N. E. A.

More Women Drunks Now Liquor's Legal

Capt. Milliken Thinks This Is Due to Novelty of Dry Law's Repeal.

THE number of women drunkards has increased rapidly since the repeal of prohibition, Capt. Rhoda Millikin, of the Woman's Bureau of the Washington Police Court, revealed yesterday.

"But this is probably due to the novelty of having liquor always available," she pointed out. "When 3.2 beer first came in there was a marked increase in the number of arrests for drunkenness. But the number gradually decreased. We are expecting there will be fewer cases of intoxication from liquor within a few months.

"Statistics now available show 550 women were arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct from January 1 to June 1, 1934. These were only the definitely intoxicated. So long as persons are able to get home and are not disturbing the peace, the police do not molest them."

Whites Drink More.

Capt. Millikin mentioned the increase in drunkenness was much greater among white women than colored.

"There were 95 more white women arrested for drunkenness in 1934 than in the preceding year, while there were only 40 more colored ones," she said.

"No change in the law concerning the penalty for drunkenness has been made since the repeal law went into affect," she said. "It is possible the law will be changed in the near future. At present, persons arrested for drunkenness pay fines of $10 and costs. They may either forfeit these fines or go to court.

Some Are Jailed.

"White women usually pay the fine, but the colored often do not have the money and go to court. They usually lose the case. Then they must pay the fine or go to jail. Persons arrested for drunkenness are detained at police headquarters until sober enough to go home. Often a relative comes to the rescue."

Prohibition liquor may not have been as pure as legal brands, but it did not have as bad an effect upon drinkers as that sold today, according to Capt. Millikin.

"Drunken women are more excitable now than when they drank bootleg whisky or synthetic gin," she said. "I think it is because the new whisky is green, raw, and undiluted. For that reason it has a much worse effect than the prohibition stuff."

Too Much of Sun Endangers Health

Doctor Issues Warning on Holiday Exposure.

NEW YORK, July 3 (Spl.).—Beware of too much sun on holiday outings. This warning is issued by Dr. Charles F. Pabst, chief dermatologist of Greenpoint Hospital, Brooklyn.

Annually for 20 years Dr. Pabst has cautioned sunbathers, seminudists and devotees of the hatless fad against too great intimacy with Old Sol. Going bareheaded he says does not produce shaggy, primitive manes but rather causes the hair to become brittle and break off.

As to trying to achieve a beach tan, it's dangerous if you happen to be a liophobe, he says. A liophobe is a person who will never tan. There are 8,000,000 of them in the United States.

Other current don'ts issued by Dr. Pabst are:

"Don't go out in the sun after eating a generous breakfast of buckwheat cakes or drinking highballs. Science has proved that such substances as quinine, alcohol, buckwheat, iron and iodine, when taken internally, render an individual extremely sensitive to the sun's rays.

"Beware of scanty bathing attire. If one-half or more of the body surface is sunburned, with the formation of blisters, serious illness and even death may result.

"Don't sprinkle perfume or toilet water on the skin before exposure to sunlight. This may produce a severe inflammation of the skin called perfume dermatitis."

Wives' Sympathy Held Nonessential to Careers

While 642 students at the first "choose a career conference" in Newark, N. J., stated they believed wives should be in sympathy with their husbands' careers, 126 students declared it did not matter to them whether their wives agreed with them in their choice of vocations.

More than 4,500 students from Eastern colleges attended the conference.

According to results of a questionnaire, the students consider teaching the most popular vocation. Banking received the most votes for work offering the greatest financial opportunities.

Career-Seeking Girls Receive Varied Advice From Notables

NEWARK, N. J., July 3 (Spl.).—The young college woman who desires a successful career has the advice of the Nation's great women to guide her.

In a recent conference here on "Choosing a Career," varied methods of attaining success were advocated by outstanding women.

Amelia Earhart Putnam—"It doesn't make much difference what you do in the beginning. A little luck should be added to the formula for success."

Theresa Helburn, director of the Theater Guild—"To get a job in the theater use all possible means."

Helen Harris, head of Union Street Settlement—"Settlement work is hardly to be called a career. It is a way of living. You do not choose it. It chooses you."

Francis Robinson, secretary to Gen. Hugh Johnson—"If you have nothing on the ball, no amount of pull will keep you on the job."

Fannie Hurst—"The writer who writes for love of money is going to be disappointed in love. If you accept the inner rewards, you win even if you lose."

Neysa McMein, commercial illustrator—"Don't guess at anatomy."

Nancy McLelland, interior decorator and Chevalier of the Legion of Honor—"With every divorce a new interior decorator is born. But it takes more than taste and the admiration of friends to make an interior decorator."

Henrietta Addington, deputy New York police commissioner in charge of crime prevention—"If you can keep your feet on the ground and maintain your ideals you will find a career in public service a satisfactory and adventurous life."

Americans Won To Sour Cream

AMERICAN housewives have gradually learned during the last few years that sour cream adds a delicious tang to fruits and berries and that it imparts a rich flavor to other recipe ingredients.

For years a sour cream called Devonshire cream has been popular in England. Berries and fruits are usually topped with sour cream in France. But it is only recently Americans have been won over to this food.

When dairymen learned many women were prejudiced by the term "sour cream," the product was put on the market under the name "cultured cream."

Womankind Suffers From Heat But Plans Autumn Wardrobes

The designers are planning too, with the result that autumn styles are now well established.

Slimness of line will dominate the skirts, fashion authorities announce, while bodices will have a smart ease of movement manifested by width at the arms, soft draping and a suggestion of a bloused line.

Tunics emphasize the slimness of the skirts, and both long and short tunics will be good. Tunics are not reserved for formal dresses, they are shown on tailored daytime clothes as well.

Tunics for evening are often of rich metal fabrics, frequently successfully combined with a monotone crepe. Often the metal is in rich dark colors for street wear, sometimes trimmed with velvet.

Metals, incidentally, are approved for afternoon, dinner and evening wear, both in dark tones and in bright ones. Metal-embroidered crepes are popular.

Wool and satin are being combined with metal cloths in the same color, the shiny material being used for the sleeves and bodice sections of the frock.

Long-sleeved dinner dresses with bodices slashed in the back are good, and are especially effective in metals. Satin, both crinkled and plain, is combined with metals in a striking fashion.

Oriental Tea Charms Real Connoisseurs

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHILE cocktails are usually considered more an American drink than tea, nevertheless there are some devotees of the steaming cup in this country turn to it for relaxation and refreshment.

They like their tea to combine delicate blended flavors perfected after years of experimentation. They like it to taste as true tea should taste. Many of these people go from shop to shop trying one brand and then another, few of them realizing a shop on Connecticut avenue, a shop one would scarcely suspect of vending tea, specializes in a fine Oriental variety.

A Chinese philosopher once, discoursing on the value of tea drinking declared it should enable one "to talk with pleasure," that it should "quiet one's heart," "awaken the drunkard," "strengthen the brain," "cure one's heart of loneliness," and enable one to "feel the poem of life."

For many centuries the Chinese have followed this method of brewing tea; use only fresh boiling water. Use only an earthenware or China tea pot. Clean the pot thoroughly with hot water before using it. Put one teaspoonful of Chinese tea to one cup of water (this can be varied according to taste). Pour fresh boiling water in the pot and let steep at least five minutes. Tea made this way should certainly be fit for a connoisseur.

Make-Up Lamps.

Those make-up lamps mentioned in this column some time ago are available now in a slightly different style. They are composed of a large mirror, an attached magnifying mirror, and a non-glarelight that provides shadowless illumination. A difference in design pulls down their price from $5.95 to $1.95.

Towels Like Flags.

Towels like flags add a gala touch to a downtown store. Several tables are devoted to this colorful display of red, blue, green, yellow towels, towels every color under the sun.

Some are small, like guest towels, others large like beach rugs. There are some a convenient intermediate size commonly used for the bath. Those who go in for stripes can find a varied choice here. There are towels with stripes running up and down and across, in as many colors as combine well.

Nor are the towels all there is to see. Wash rags, thick, rough and very absorbent, come in many designs and colors to match the congregation of towels.

Sunshade Net Caps.

Net caps for driving have long been both at hand and in demand. But now what should appear but the queerest looking net caps for the sun. These fit snugly over the head to hold curls in place or to keep knots from straggling down. Across the front eye shades are securely attached.

Snowball Scrapers.

Typical of Washington summers are the snowball carts that roll their way down the wide, shady avenues, and surprising the number of adults who draw up alongside and rather guiltily order "snowballs."

A downtown store has just gotten in some snowball scrapers which the housewife is going to find much to her liking. No pleasanter nor more informal manner of serving refreshments to unexpected callers. She has ice at hand, and scrapers, too. She only needs to keep some flavoring, orange, grapejuice or cherry syrup.

But there's another use for snowball scrapers. They break ice into fine particles for mint juleps or almost any kind of extra special cocktail.

Patriotic Lipstick.

Fourth of July party prizes and hostess gifts are just a couple of other things to bother the harassed hot weather shopper!

A downtown store has some lipsticks and compacts in red, white and blue, very appropriate. The lipsticks resemble drums and the compacts match. The latter are available in double or single style.

Mist of Dawn.

Mist of Dawn is the name of a new finishing cream giving a "misty" effect to the skin. After powder and rouge have been applied over it, the color scheme seems to take on a new glow.

Radio Waves and Ripples

SUSIE will not go on the air at 1:45 p. m. today from WRC's studios.

This sorrowful decision was made by N. B. C. officials. It was emphatic, unrelentless, irrevocable.

Susie is the nine-year-old dray horse that guided "Nic" Broussard's buggy over 1,600 miles of rocky turf to the White House. Nic claims to be the oldest Democrat from the State of Louisiana. Monday he and Susie and two chickens rambled to town. The birds, luscious and succulent to behold but not to chew, were to have been presented to the Presidential table.

Nic, however, will be interviewed by Ted Shawn, N. B. C. announcer, at the aforementioned hour. You will learn how he's going to get back, what he feeds Susie, the low down on chicken culture and what he thinks of our fair city . . . but tears will crinkle the lids of Louisiana's first New Dealer . . . he won't have Susie at his elbow to just rub his shoulder and say: "It's all right, old pal."

We suggested that Susie might have something to say, too, over the air. But N. B. C. officials were adamant. What! A horse in N. B. C. studios, they moaned. Tch! Tch!

If memory isn't too fleeting, there was once a female member of the cattle family that took tea with the District Commissioners. Intrepid beast . . . she braved elevators and anxious newspaper men to gain the interview. Susie, we fear, must stay on the ground.

HAVING only one local Fourth of July event to worry about today, WJSV is going to leave the drum pounding and the cornet cacophony to the networks.

Station executives, stenogs, engineers and commercial salesmen will be out shooting golf and some Chinese crackers that will only go "pffffth" anyway . . . and still there will be enough faithfuls left at the studio to stand at attention at 11:45 a. m. as the Jewish War Vets do their stuff at Arlington.

From WJSV's very innermost sanctum was heard a blithe, chirpy voice: "Mr. Church, are you going to work on the Fourth of July?"

Gutteral and glum the answer lurched forth: "I work every day—24 hours a day." We know you do, Ted, and it's fine and, as John Milton once said to Edna St. Vincent Millay, "Don't mix your figs with your thistles."

Rosa Ponselle (star of thrice-weekly series over C. B. S.)—"I feel as though I am singing in my own drawing room for a few friends."

Kate Smith (the corset salesman's pal)—"On my forthcoming programs I plan to present more songs."

Johnny Green (young composer-pianist)—"Half of the compositions which have been presented in the past to radio listeners as 'modern American music' are neither American nor modern."

Muriel Wilson (soloist on "Lavender and Old Lace")—"I classify myself as a prima donna with a sense of humor."

Victor Kolar (conducting Detroit Symphony Orchestra series)—"I have been most impressed by the fact that many patrons of our summer concerts are hard-working individuals * * * and these plain people from many walks of life often show a sounder feeling, a deeper understanding, and a more genuine enthusiasm for good music than many of our more sophisticated concert-goers."

HELEN CHOATE, ingenuous-appearing young actress, heard frequently over N. B. C. networks, belies her ingenuousness. She's usually cast in "heavy" villainess roles.

YOU would expect Independence Day orators to make at least one perspiring reference to American "insti-too-shuns" and deliver several soul-shaking aphorisms pointing out that the Constitution has been the "very backbone of our National life." But we did not expect and feel slightly shaken up over the fact that one great American publisher calls us all a bunch of "human rabbits."

Speaking to an enthusiastic group of American Legion members, this said publisher declared over a C. B. S. network:

"If it were possible for us to go back, or better still, go forward to the principles that it (the Constitution) advocates, the progress made in the last two centuries would be repeated. But if we smother initiative * * * continue our mollycoddling procudure" * * *, et cetera—ad nauseum * * * "we will settle down to be a Nation of rabbits."

Having slung this at his breathless audience with a final heroic flourish, our speaker mopped his brow, poked his nose in the ice pitcher and sidled to a chair safe in the belief that his topic "Shall We Scrap the American Constitution?" had gone clean to the hearts of all hearth-loving citizens.

Red, White, Blue Smart For Celebration Outfits

For Swimming, Sunning or Sports It's Unbeatable Combination.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Not all the red-white-and-blue is confined to the flags waving in celebration of today. Plenty of holiday costumes flaunt it, too.

Not just because it is the Fourth of July, either. But because red-white-and-blue happens to be as smart in the costumes as it is in the flag.

Gay for Sports.

If you got to a ball game, a tennis match or any other sporting event, you're sure to see it gaying up the scene.

And if you finish up your holiday at a dance, you'll still see this patriotic color combination whirling about the floor.

Not all these red-white-and-blue costumes are made of red-white-and-blue materials. Though some are. Stripes, plaids, prints and dotted patterns do use all three colors in combination, especially in cottons.

But there are many more costumes made up of a solid color dress with the other two colors in accessories. And most often the dress or suit will be white, with the red and blue in the accessories.

But like the firecrackers of the day, the red-white-and-blue costume must be handled with care. The trick, of course, in assembling such a combination is not to look like the flag when you're finished.

Not, for example, to do as we saw one woman dressed the other day. She wore a white dress with a red-white-and-blue printed scarf, a white hat with a red-and-blue striped band, a blue handbag with red initials, a blue-and-red twisted rope belt, a red bracelet on one wrist and a blue one on the other.

All these things were smart enough alone. But massed as they were, the effect was riotous rather than pleasant.

Two Colors and Accent.

Quite in contrast to her was another woman also in a white dress. Over it she wore a blue linen jacket. Her handbag was white with blue initials. Her hat white with a blue band. At the neckline of her dress was a large, bright red clip.

As a rule the smartest red-white-and-blue costumes are composed mainly of two colors with just a small accent of the third.

Those smart blue-and-white prints, for instance, might be combined with a bright red handbag and bracelet, with other accessories in either blue or white. Or a plain blue dress might wear a red belt with all other accessories in white.

Costumes and accessories of the types described may be found in Washington in all the better women's wear shops and department stores.

Strictly Speaking

East Side, West Side.

1. What are some of the typical "lower East Side" pronunciations?

2. If one has a love affair, is it a RO-mance or a ro-MANCE?

3. Is it permissible to use the word cute to mean winsome or pretty?

4. What is the meaning of the Italian phrase sotto voce, and how is it pronounced?

5. Where is the accent in the word interesting?

Pronounce Them This Way.

1. Typical "lower East Side" pronunciations are given such words as avenue when it is called AV-e-noo; news, called NOOSE, and Tuesday as TOOS-deh. These words are properly pronounced AV-e-new, NEWS and TEWS-day.

2. A love affair is a ro-MANCE—not a RO-mance.

3. Cute—meaning winsome or pretty—is a provincialism and one who seeks purity of speech should avoid all provincialisms, according to one authority who adds, "Yet the use of cute is only a minor offense."

4. Sotto voce—pronounced SO-to VO-chay—is an adverb meaning "in an undertone."

5. The accent in interesting is on the first syllable. The word is pronounced IN-trest-ing (with three syllables) but never in-TREST-ing.

Latest Child Prodigy Mathematical Whizz

RUSSIA claims the latest child prodigy. A 9-year-old boy, Kolya Dmitriyef, is being hailed as a second Pascal by doctors and teachers who have examined the youth's mathematical prowess.

With speed and ease, Kolya recently solved the most complicated and difficult problems in physics, algebra, geometry and trigonometry before an examining commission in Moscow.

After observing the boy, Prof. Tchistyakof, of the people's commissariat of education's examining commission, said he had never met with young Dmitriyef's equal in his 40 years' experience. In his opinion the youth is a genius such as comes along about once in 100 years.

In addition to his brilliance in mathematics, the young Russian has read the works of Turgenieff, Tolstoy, Gogol and Dickens. He is to receive the best possible education along all lines.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

"GO there? What on nearth do you mean? Pete's all right. The announcer said that he'd saved other people."

"But he said he'd been badly burned," she cried. "We don't know how badly. He may be dying."

"But it's a couple of hundred miles from here, isn't it?"

She shook her head.

"Not over a hundred and fifty. We could do it, at night, in four hours. And we've got to do it." Her voice rose.

"But why?" he asked. "The best care is being taken of him. You must realize that. What can we do for him?"

"We're his friends. I don't know what we can do, but we ought to do something," she insisted.

"But we'd only be in the way," he argued. "God knows, if we could do anything for Pete——But we can't. I'll send a wire to the mayor of the town——"

"Can't we telephone somebody?" she interposed. "Bert, we just can't sit here doing nothing while Pete is suffering. We cant'!"

Martha's voice was pitched even higher now. Cranston, looking at her, remembered Baxter's confession of love on that tragic day when they had found Gerrish's body.

"I'll do everything I can," he said. "If you want I'll get a car and drive to Abdegon now."

"That's what I want. I'll tell Mrs. Gray that I have to go——"

"But you can't go," he protested.

"Why not?"

"We won't get there until long after midnight. You're tired from your trip today. There won't be room in a hotel. You know a little town hasn't accommodations for the crowd that will pour in there."

"What difference does that make? I can sit up all night. I won't want to go to bed anyway."

"You're excited," he told her. "You'd only be in the way. You can't do anything."

"I don't care whether I can or not. I'm going."

Scandal Will Rise.

"Please. Be reasonable, Martha. You heard that radio announcer. He said that Pete had figured in the Blaisdell-Gerrish scandal. Why rivive that scandal? My God, if you go there, the papers will get hold of it and they'll print the whole thing over again. All they need is a dramatic excuse to revive it. You don't want that."

"I don't see why they'd do that," she said.

"Common sense ought to show you why. You and I and Baxter, united again at his bedside. Why, the papers couldn't overlook it. He came to your rescue two weeks ago. Now, you come to his. If you begged them to print your name and your picture, you couldn't succeed better than you will if you go to see Peter. I won't have it, Martha."

Her eyes hardened.

"You mean that because of more scandal you'd let me fail Peter now?"

She Must Go.

"But you aren't failing him. I've told you that you can't do any good. You ought to be able to see that. All you can do is cause more newspaper talk about the thing we both want forgotten. Martha, if you won't do it for yourself, won't you do it for me? Stay here; let me go. Won't that do?"

"I have to go," she said. "Don't argue with me, please. But take me. Take me to Peter. Right away."

"And what about the answer you were to give me tonight?" he demanded.

"How can you ask me that now?" she evaded. "Bert, Peter may be dying. We have to go."

He stared at her a full half minute. Then he spoke.

"Martha, are you by any chance in love with Peter?"

Her face went dead white.

"I—I don't know," she replied.

"I do," he said. "Get a wrap and hat. I'll take you to Peter."

Town Suddenly Alive.

Abdegon, that little town whose name had been heard by millions of radio listeners and which in the morning would be in the headlines of every newspaper in the country, was busier at 2 o'clock this morning than it had ever been at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the last days of of the county fair. Notoriety had been thrust upon Abdegon; a few miles away the Caribou Flier had crashed into a freight train, and all of Abdegon that was not turned into a hospital was turned into a receiving station for reporters and cameramen and relatives and friends of the catastrophe.

For the first time in the history of the little town the Abdegon House served a meal after midnight; the local drug store was doing business at 2 in the morning. The telephone operator would remember all her life that the White House had called to inquire as to the tragedy. Down the Main street rolled the car in which sat Martha and Bert Cranston.

The hours that had elapsed since they left Blairsport would always be a blank to Martha. She remembered going upstairs and telling Mrs. Gray that she was leaving for the scene of the railroad wreck. Her employer had eyed her shrewdly. She had been listening to a radio in her bedroom.

Martha Recognized.

"The gentleman calling on you is named Cranston, isn't he?" Mrs. Gray had asked. "And I heard the announcer say that Dr. Peter Baxter had been injured in the wreck. Is your name really Clara Tranter? You know, since the moment I met you in Mrs. Detwiler's office your face has seemed familiar. Now I know of whom it reminds me: of Martha Blaisdell's pictures in the newspaper."

"I'm Martha Blaisdell," admitted Martha, "and if Dr. Baxter is hurt I ought——"

"Of course you ought," said Mrs. Gray. She looked at the girl sympathetically. She quoted Agatha Detwiler unconsciously. "You poor dear darling, I don't suppose you'll come back to me."

"Won't you want me?" asked Martha.

"At any time," replied Mrs. Gray. "You can be Clara Tranter here as long as you like. But you won't come back."

"Why do you say that?" asked Martha.

Mrs. Gray smiled.

"I don't know; I just feel it. But write to me, and tell me where to send your things."

Promise to Write.

Impulsively Martha leaned over and kissed the woman.

"Of course I'll write you. And I expect to be back in a day or so, so I'll just say au revoir."

She packed a suitcase and went downstairs. Cranston had not delayed. By telephone he had engaged from the hotel a closed car and without any talk at all he carried Martha's bag to the machine and assisted her into it.

She leaned back and remained leaning back for the period of the ride. She did not sleep, yet she could not be termed awake. Once or twice Cranston offered her cigarettes, which she accepted and several times he asked questions about her comfort. Did she want a robe around her? Was the car going too fast? would she prefer to have him ride with the driver so that she could curl up in the back seat and have a nap? But that was all, and none of these things registered upon her mind.

Pete Baxter had been injured. Bert wanted to know if she was in love with Pete. Was she? And if she wasn't, why had hear heart almost stopped beating when the announcer mentioned the doctor's name?

Arrived at Hotel.

The car stopped finally before the little hotel in Abdegon. Cranston alighted, entered the hotel and made inquiries. He returned in a moment, gave instructions to the chauffeur and in a couple of minutes the car stopped again before a brightly lighted brick buiulding set back 30 yards from the main street. The lawn was crowded with people who milled back and forth.

"Pete's in her. It's the hospital, said Cranston.

Martha looked a question at him, and the agony in her eyes had its counterpart in his heart.

Relief showed instantly in her face, but this relief did not communicate itself to him.

They pushed their way through the crowd and on the steps of the hospital a man exclaimed at sight of them.

"It's Cranston," he cried. "And Miss Blaisdell. Well, for heavens sake, where did you two come from? And hold it, folks."

Photographs Taken.

Beside them there was a flash of light and a puff of white smoke.

"Hope you don't mind," said the speaker, "but my camera man had to get you two. You remember me. I'm from the Planet. Give me a few words so that I can shoot them to New York in time for the first edition in the morning. Where were you two when you got news of this disaster? Were you together? Did you know Baxter was on the train? Come on, spill something. All I've got so far is tragedy; I want a little human interest, maybe a little love interest for the morning paper. You two weren't in Buffalo, were you? Not at Niagara Falls? My God, you weren't married and on a honeymoon?"

"Don't you think you've printed enough about us? Can't you let us alone when we come to visit an injured friend?"

"Be reasonable," said the reporter. "You people are news, and you always will be news, so what's the use of being high-hat? Tell me something, anything."

"We haven't a thing on earth to tell you," said Cranston angrily. He took Martha's arm and urged her past the man. The reporter shrugged. After all, their mere presence was worth a few paragraphs. And he'd wait around and perhaps they'd talk later.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Hay Fever and Filtered Air.

The widespread prevalence of hay fever due to ragweed pollen is well known, and the annual pilgrimage in search of summer resorts free from this irritating substance is a practical necessity with many sufferers. Certain hay-fever victims, however, find it impossible to journey to a Northern climate, and various means have been suggested of rendering the air breathed by the hay-fever patient free of ragweed pollen. As a makeshift expedient sheets soaked with water have been hung over open windows. The wearing of masks covering the nose and mouth has been suggested and tried, but without satisfactory results.

It is impossible to live in a closed, stuffy room, as the average individual requires 200 and 300 cubic feet of air per minute for ventilation and comfort. If some simple means may be found of filtering pollen from the air admitted to the room containing a hay-fever patient a veritable boon will be conferred upon sufferers from this annoying disease. Difficulties are at once encountered when it is realized that pollen floating in the air is microscopic in size and will pass closed windows that are not absolutely air tight.

In recent years ventilating engineers have been experimenting with air filters, and after many attempts it has been clearly shown that while a wet spray will clean a high percentage of dust particles from the air, pollen will pass this barrier. Bacteriologists have learned that a plug of cotton in the mouth of a test tube will prevent the entrance of bacteria to the culture media contained in the tube.

Using this principle, air forced through wool, wood or cotton fibers that are sufficiently dense will be freed from a high percentage of noxious pollen. By using an accordion-plait design a large surface may be condensed into a relatively small space. After many experiments, a mixture of wood fiber and cotton has been found to be reasonably efficient.

The windows and doors of the room must be tightly weather stripped and the frames calked with some plastic material. Increased efficiency will be secured by the installation of double windows, a tightly fitting casement sash inside the sliding sash. Air from the outside may be either forced or drawn by suction through the filter. The lower the speed the greater the efficiency of the filter.

Sometimes a homemade apparatus works well. In one instance a sufferer from hay fever took an ordinary single sash wire screen, covered it on each side with a half-inch layer of cotton, and installed it tightly just inside the lower cash. An ordinary 12-inch fan was boxed in on the outside of the raised window, forcing air through the improvised filter, with the result that the hay-fever sufferer was able to obtain a comfortable night's sleep.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

In professional and industrial lines, there will be practically little attempt made to transact business, save by those places and people which are essential to provide the needs required by their community. A holiday spirit will prevail. July 4 is a good day to keep your eyes and ears wide open. Avoid taking foolhardy chances with anything of an explosive nature. Your motto should be "discretion is the better part of valor." There should be numerous social gatherings, with gayety reigning supreme. This may prove an ideal day for pouring out your heart and soul to the one you adore.

If a woman and born on July 4, you should, unless you are an exception to the average woman born on this date, have a fine physique and plenty of "pep." You are capable of carrying out your ideas, which are very original, and at times rather startling to your family and friends. Your creative genius assures your success in life.

Children born on July 4, as they grow up, display an unusual amount of activity, both physically and mentally, and as a rule enjoy excellent health. They usually are inclined to be curious, but not in an offensive way. Their inquisitiveness is prompted by a desire to learn, so it might be just as well to encourage it.

If a man and born on July 4, your greatest fault is an inclination to be too open-handed. You possibly find it a difficult matter to say no, especially if it is any one you are very fond of that requests your help. A very good motto for you is "charity begins at home."

Fresh White Comes Back To Kitchens

WHEN modern decoration in all its angularity and fierce color descended on the country it was almost a sin to possess anything so reactionary as a kitchen done in white and containing ordinary workmanlike table and chairs. Pretension had entered the kitchens of the land and the result was pretty wild. The homiest place in the house tried to go fancy, and no doubt the souffles, prunes and cereals weren't half so well concocted as in the days before cooks had so much decoration to distract them.

Getting Seedy Now.

That phase lasted a couple of years. No doubt housewives wished they could shorten the period, but one can't do over an entire kitchen just for what disapproving husbands call a whim.

Now that the simulated chromium is beginning to peel and the whole effect to look pretty seedy, ladies of many homes are facing their budgets with clear consciences and redecorating their kitchens.

White, the standby in the old days, is coming back. Those households manned by plenty of servant power can afford the upkeep incident on all-white kitchens. They're charming, if a bit impractical. The majority of redone kitchens, however, are being decorated with white as a basis and brilliant colors in trim, furniture or curtains to offset it.

Plain Green Obsolete.

The all-green kitchen, seen so frequently under the aegis of modern decoration, is becoming obsolete. Green with white, however, is accepted as attractive and practical. White, with black and red to point it up is receiving lots of acclaim. Used conservatively it's not as nightmareish as it sounds. Blue and red is another combination that's successful.

Keeping all this snowy whiteness looking snowy used to be somewhat of a problem. Fortunately there are new finishes available which really stay white and don't turn a depressing gray after several months. Besides being more lasting in color they're more durable, can stand harder scrubbing. Also this redoing of the kitchen won't have to turn the household inside out for a week or so; these finishes are quick-drying. A couple of hours is sufficient time to allow before a piece of furniture can be in active service again.

Midsummer Canning Will Improve Next Winter's Fruitless Menus.

By Susan Mills.

A LITTLE midsummer canning will add zest and variety to winter menus. Now when cherries and raspberries are ready to be canned, preserve them and lay them away on your shelves for future consumption.

Cherry and Raspberry Conserve.

1 cup cherries
1 cup red raspberries
1½ cups sugar

Cook the cherries in a very small amount of water until the skins are tender. Add the raspberries and the sugar. Cook until the mixture is thick and clear. Pour into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin.

Cherry Jelly.

3 cups cherry juice
6½ cups sugar
1 cup bottled pectin

Use only fully ripe fruit. Do not pit. Stem and crush the cherries. Add one-half cup water, stir until mixture boils, cover, and simmer ten minutes. Drip through jelly bag. Measure juice and sugar into large saucepan, stir, and bring to a boil.

At once add pectin, stirring constantly, and bring again to a full rolling boil. Boil one-half minute. Remove from fire, let stand one minute, skim, pour quickly. Cover hot jelly with a film of hot paraffin; when jelly is cold cover with one-eighth inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides.

Plain Cherry Preserves.

4 pounds sugar
1 cup cherry juice

Make syrup of the cherry juice and sugar. Add the pitted cherries and cook rapidly until the fruit is transparent and the syrup thick. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal.

And now for the raspberry recipes:

Red Raspberry Jam.

Pick over the berries and wash them carefully. Weigh, and to each pound of fruit allow three-fourths pound of sugar. Heat the berries gently in a preserving-kettle. When the juice starts, mash with a wooden potato masher. Add the sugar and cook rapidly until thick and clear. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Old-Fashioned Raspberry Syrup.

1 quart sugar
¾ cup cold water

Mash the berries. Add sugar Cover. Let stand overnight. In the morning, add water. Bring mixture to a boil. Boil 20 minutes. Strain through a fine strainer. Bring to the boil again. Pour into sterilized jars. Seal tight. This is excellent as a foundation for drinks or as a sauce for ice cream.

Raspberry Preserves.

2 pounds sugar

Mix whole fruit and sugar. Place mixture over heat and stir carefully until it boils. Boil six minutes. Pour into sterilized jars. Seal.

Helen Jacobs Triumphs Easily

Misses Round, Hartigan and Mme. Mathieu Also Advance.

By Gayle Talbot.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 3 (AP).—The women's division of the Wimbledon tennis championships assumed a true international flavor today as the champions of the world's four greatest tennis nations attained the singles semifinals.

Two of them—Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, and Joan Hartigan, of Australia—won over vastly favored opponents, while Helen Hull Jacobs, American champion and favorite to win the crown Helen Wills Moody is not defending, as well as Dorothy Round, English standard bearer, sailed in as expected.

The American forces suffered their keenest disappointment of the eight days of play so far when Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, the darling of the troupe, failed to get her game consistently under control and was given a beating by Mme. Mathieu, the stoop-shouldered French matron, mother of three children, 6—3, 6—8, 6—2.

Toys With Cilli Assuem.

Miss Jacobs, playing superbly, toyed with Cilli Assuem, German girl who won the women's title here in 1931, winning, 6—0, 6—2, but little Sarah could not keep a pace that would have matched the American men's singles showing with Frank Shields and Sidney Wood in the semifinals.

The Boston miss was hampered by a sore heel, but in the final analysis it was the superior pace and accuracy of Mme. Mathieu's ground strokes that carried the day. Sarah was wild shooting for the baselines in the first set, and drove frequently into the net. She got her game suddenly under control to win out in the deuced second set, but she lost her touch just as quickly in the third set and passed out of the tournament.

The British forces got their shock when Miss Hartigan, about whose game Wimbledon had received only vague rumors up to last week, dusted off Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, left-handed British ace, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Fast Forehand Drive.

The Australian champion unleashed a forehand drive that experts declared was as fast as any ever produced by a woman here. While that was sufficient to turn back Miss Scriven, observers predicted that the story will be different when Miss Hartigan encounters Miss Jacobs Thursday. Helen thrives on speed, and besides Miss Hartigan's backhand looks wobbly.

Miss Round, who defeated Mlle. Lolette Payot, of Switzerland, 6—4, 6—2, today, is favored to take over Mme. Mathieu Thursday and thus renew in the final round her old feud with Miss Jacobs. In their six major meetings, Helen has won the last four in a row. Miss Round beat her the last time in the semifinals of the 1933 Wimbledon championships.

Men's Semifinals.

To a majority of Wimbledon fans today's program was only a breathing spell before tomorrow's big storm of men's singles semifinals. The center court seats have been sold out and it is expected that a long line will be waiting to grab standing room when the gates open for the duels of the two Americans, Shields and Wood, against the best in the British Empire, the Australian, Jack Crawford, and Fred Perry, of England, respectively.

Crawford, who had been reported sick man with a sore throat and temperature of 100, showed up at the courts in midafternoon, looking fit and spry. It is conceded that he will need all the condition he can muster against Shields, who for once in his career is as hard as rawhide.

The betting commissioners would offer no better than even money that Perry, ace of Britain's Davis Cup champions, would beat Wood, No. 1 man of the American squad. Wood's dazzling all-round play through the past week has made a big impression.

Frisch, Gonzales Fined After Row

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—Manager Frankie Frisch, of the St. Louis Cardinals, was fined $100 and Coach Mike Gonzales $25 today by President John A. Heydler of the National League for failure to leave the field immediately when ordered to do so by Umpire Bill Klem in yesterday's game with the Cubs.

Frisch, Gonzales and Pitcher Dizzy Dean were ousted by Klem in the seventh inning for too strenuous a protest over Klem's decision that a pop fly hit in front of the plate by Chuck Klein, with the bases loaded, was not an infield fly.

Tigers Humble Indians, Gain On Yankees

Hamlin Starts First Game of Year and Wins, 7-2; Goslin Bat Star.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 3 (AP).—Luke Hamlin, the right-handed fast-ball expert of the Detroit Tigers, celebrated his twenty-eighth birthday anniversary here today by letting the Indians down with 6 hits and 2 runs, while his teammates from Detroit entered enthusiastically into the celebration by knocking out 12 hits, giving Detroit the game, 7 to 2.

By their victory the Tigers gained a full game on the league-leading New York Yankees, who were beaten by Boston in 11 innings, 10 to 9. The Yanks now lead by one game.

It was the first game of the season Hamlin had started. He had a touch of malarial fever early in the year and only recently recovered sufficiently to serve as a relief pitcher.

Goslin Gets Homer.

walked, Lhite singled to left, scor-

The festivities slackened some then until the sixth inning when Goslin and Gehringer decided to brighten up the party again. With Cochrane on base, Goslin singled, sending the catcher to third. Gehringer knocked a double against the right field wall, scoring Cochrane and sending Goslin to third. When Rogell's grounder went through Second Baseman ale's legs, both Goslin and Gehringer scored.

All this enthusiasm was wasted on the Indians who apparently did not care for the party, although Monte Pearson in the six innings he pitched did make a number of contributions. He walked six men, made one wild pitch and gave the Tigers ten hits.

Pilots Select All-Star Teams

Fans' Votes Not Followed by Either Terry or Cronin.

Simmons, Finney, Russell Added to American Line-up.

By Alan Gould.

NEW YORK, July 3 (AP).—Proponents of a "subway series" this fall between the Yankees and Giants for the world baseball championship may enjoy something of a pre-view when the all-star teams of the National and American League battle in gilt-edged formation next Tuesday at the Polo Grounds.

Ten players from the two New York clubs, including six Yankees and four Giants, are among the 40 baseball satellites named today for baseball's spectacular mid-season show.

Joe Cronin, field boss of the champion Washington Nationals and manager of the American League All-Stars, paid his tribute to the Bronx brigade by selecting Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Lefty Gomez, Red Ruffing and Ben Chapman. Bill Terry, besides playing first-base and managing the Nationals, has recruited Carl Hubbell, Mel Ott and Travis Jackson from the Giants.

Terry also planned to have Joe Moore, his agile left-fielder, on the All-Star bench, but Joe has a lame arm and yields the honor to Kiki Cuyler of the Cubs. This change gives Chicago the honor of contributing five stars to the National League squad, inasmuch as Terry already had chosen Chuck Klein, Gabby Hartnett, Lon Warneke and Billy Herman for regular or reserve duty.

All eight American League clubs have at least one representative in the all-star cast, but the Phillies and Cincinnati Reds failed to muster a single man for the Nationals. In the ordinary process of events, Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies would have been the third backstop for the Nationals, but Terry decided to limit himself to a pair of catchers, Al Lopez, of Brooklyn, and Hartnett, in order to have an additional infielder.

Here's the way the rival teams will take the field, except for the batteries:

The selections by Terry and Cronin, which are final, tally for the most part with the results of the popular poll, conducted by newspapers throughout the country. Terry, if he starts Jackson at short, will differ with the fans only in the selection of Ott, in place of Wally Berger of the Braves, for the third outfield job. Cronin disregarded the fans' vote in naming Higgins over Jimmie Dykes, White Sox manager, for third base and in selecting Simmons, instead of Earl Averill of the Indians, for starting duty in the outfield.

Cronin Picks Russell.

The Washington manager's chief departure from popular opinion, however, involves his pitching staff. There was no disagreement on Gomez, brilliant Yankee southpaw, or Tommy Bridges of the Tigers, but Cronin named Red Ruffing of the Yankees, Mel Harder of the Indians, and Jack Russell, crack right-handed relief man of the Senators. The fan's choices, after Gomez, were Earl Whitehill of the Senators, Lefty Grove of the Red Sox and Willis Hudlin of the Indians.

Cronin agreed with the fans in picking Dickey and Mickey Cochrane, Tiger manager, for backstop duty, but selected Rick Ferrell, of the Boston Red Sox, instead of Rollie Hemsley, of the Browns, as the third man behind the bat.

Terry concurred 80 per cent with the fans in picking Hubbell, Warneke, Dizzy Dean, of the Cardinals, and Van Mungo, of the Dodgers, for pitching chores, but preferred Fred Frankhouse, of the Braves, to either Guy Bush, of the Cubs, or Paul Dean, of the Cardinals. Bush and P. Dean both topped Frankhouse in the popular poll, despite the Boston hurler's presence at the top of the league pitching list.

Foxx, Dykes Substitutes.

For substitute duty, the Americans will have Jimmie Foxx, of the Athletics, and Jimmie Dykes, of the White Sox, infielders; Chapman, of the Yankees; Averill, of the Indians, and Sam West, of the Browns, outfielders. The reserves for the Nationals are Herman, of the Cubs, and Pepper Martin, of the Cardinals, infielders; Paul Waner, of the Pirates; Berger, of the Braves, and Cuyler, of the Cubs, outfielders.

Jackson Appointed.

Emory, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—Announcement was made today that W. S. "Pedie" Jackson, Emory and Henry College coach, would join the staff of the all-sports coaching school at Milligan College, near Johnson City, Tenn., August 13-20.

Fireworks Aplenty Slated As Golfers Observe 'Fourth'

IN keeping with the annual custom, Washington golfers will help celebrate Independence Day with a lot fo fireworks on the links. The fireworks will consist of pairs, birdies, eagles and maybe holes-in-one, evploding from high-powered woods, irons and putters.

The heavy cannonading along the District fronts will start early in the morning, and, dspite the humidity and possible rain, will continue well into the gloaming. Twelve private clubs have scheduled attractive events that run the gamut of best ball, flag, tombstone, medal handicap, match play against par, pitching, driving and putting.

While no tournaments are on tap at the four municipal courses, managers at Rock Creek, East Potomac, West Potomac and Anacostia are preparing for record turnouts.

Congressional Country Clu is putting on a tombstone tournament to be followed by pitching and putting conetsts for both men and women. A best ball two-ball event, with one-half combined handicap to count, will e served up to members at Columbia. Chevy Chase will stage a medal play handicap tournament.

A flag tournament, driving and putting contests are on the ill at Kenwood, while Indian Spring has scheduled a flag tournament for men and women. Army and Navy is sponsoring a match play against par and handicap events.

Washington Golf and Country Clu is offering a flag tournament for men and putting contest for women, and a flag tournament will be Argyle Country Club's contribution.

A heavy program has een scheduled for Beaver Dam, with the battle for the President's Cup the feature. This is an 18-hole handicap competition. Driving, approaching and putting tourneys also are on tap.

Manor has carded a flag and 18-hole handicap tournament. Woodmont's lone event is a flag tournament, and Bannockburn's a medal handicap.

Phils Rout Dodgers, 11-2, to Even Series

Brooklyn, July 3 (AP).—Van Mungo's third attempt to win his twelfth game of the season ended in defeat today as the Phillies crushed the Brooklyn Dodgers, 11 to 2, and evened the series.

Brooklyn's star pitcher suffered his third straight upset and his ninth reverse of the season as he yielded the mound in the eighth and the Dodgers took a sound trouncing. Mungo was out of the game when the Phillies pounded Leslie Munns and Watson Clark for seven runs in the eighth inning. It was Clark's first appearance as a Dodger since he recently was traded by the New York Giants.

Weaver Wins His 9th of Season

and Cronin chose a spot in the eighth when both Myer and Stone were on base to park his home run into the convenient left-field bleachers as the Nats shamed Foxx's two homers in point of run production.

So, the Nats stretched their winning streak to two straight games; Monte Weaver acquired the ninth pitching victory he has been seeking in vain for three weeks, and Foxx all but overhauled his clubmate, Bob Johnson, in the American League home run derby, trailing by one after his second homer, which was his twenty-third of the season.

14-Hit Attack.

The Nats were scoring only in even innings today. They got two in the second, one in the fourth, splurged with five in the sixth, and came back in the eighth for four more. These runs were generated by 14 hits that included besides the homers of Cronin and Stone, a triple by Buddy Myer, doubles by Fred Schulte, and Cecil Travis, and three singles by Red Kress, who always claimed he could hit .500 in this park.

The A's performed the difficult feat of scoring only one run on a homer and three singles in the second inning when they became entangled in a double play after the Nats took the lead with two runs that were the direct outgrowth of doubles by Travis and Schulte.

Cain Pounded Out.

The Nats were riding out in front, 3—1, in the sixth when they blasted John (Sugar) Cain off the mound with a five-run uprising that was started by Travis' single to left. An error by Warstler soon filled the bases and Buddy Myer cleared 'em with a triple to center. He came home on Stone's homer over the right field wall and Stone followed him across with the fifth run of the inning that put the Nats ahead, 8—1.

Jimmy Foxx reclaimed one run in the sixth by smacking his second homer full over the left field grandstand, and then they shook Weaver loose from four runs in the seventh, three of them when Higgins popped a short double into right field with the bases full.

Four More in [illegible].

The Nats answered this attack with a counter-rally of four runs against Leroy Mahaffey in the eighth after Weaver had led off with a single. Then followed a safe bunt by Myer, a single by Stone, and Cronin's sock into the left field upper deck that deposited three runs at the plate. Weaver held that 12-6 lead safe in the last two innings.

The only sour note of the day for the Nats was Heinie Manush's failure to hit safely in five times at bat, his average taking an awful sock in the brisket.

Cards Trim Cubs On 13-Hit Attack

Hallahan Goes Route, but Weakens Near Finish.

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals took better advantage of their 13 hits than did the Cubs today, so the Redbirds gained an even split of the two-game series with a 7-to-3 victory.

Bill Hallahan went the route for the Cardinals and shut out the Reds until the sixth. Meanwhile, his mates were piling up a 6-to-0 lead by pecking at Guy Bush until they chased him in the fourth, and then benefited from the wildness of Roy Joiner and Pat Malone, who passed two men across the plate in the fifth. Bud Tinning and Charley Root also pitched for the Cubs.

Wister, of Michigan, Most Valuable Player

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—Francis ("Whitey") Wistert, Michigan's star pitcher, was named the Big Ten's most valuable player in a vote of eight conference coaches, Coach Kyle Anderson of the University of Chicago, announced today.

Wistert won the recognition by a small margin over Vern Wilshire, ace left hander of the Indiana team. Ashlet Offill, University of Chicago catcher, was third.

Anderson conducted the contest as part of a campaign to stimulate interest in college baseball. Northwestern and Ohio State were the only teams which did not nominate their most valuable players, from which the Big Ten's most valuable player was chosen by the coaches.

Braves Defeat Giants, 5-2, On Homer

Parmalee Fails in First Start Since April; Gives 7 Hits.

BOSTON, July 3 (AP).—Bill Urbanski's home run off Roy Parmelee with two out and two men on base in the fourth inning, gave the Boston Braves the margin by which they defeated the New York Giants, 5 to 2, today, concluding the two-game series with an even break.

It was Parmelee's first start for the Giants since April 19, when he opposed the Phillies. The Giant right hander, who had been recovering from an appendectomy, yielded seven hits, walked three and made a wild pitch in the four innings in which he worked. The Giants' pitching assignment was then passed on to Lefty Al Smith, who gave way to Adolph Luque in the seventh.

Betts Gets Credit.

Walter Betts started on the mound for Boston and was replaced by Southpaw Ed Brandt in the seventh, with two gone and men on second and third as the result of Pinch-Hitter Grantham's single and Critz's double. Betts, however, received credit for the game.

A pass to Jackson in the second, Watkins' double and Ryan's fly-out gave the Giants their first run in the second. The New Yorkers tallied again in the fifth after Watkins doubled, took third on an infield out and scored after Lee caught Mancuso's fly.

Boston contrived its first run on a pass to Urbanski in the third, a double by McManus and Thompson's single. Spohrer doubled with two gone in the fourth, Betts walked and then Urbanski parked his homer in the left-field bleachers. Boston's fifth and last run was made off Luque in the seventh when Berger singled, R. Moore bunted and Whitney singled.

Daily Double Pair Pays $69.40

Five-Year-Old Gelding Given Hustling Ride by Cantara.

Jockey Bides His Time, Waits Until Stretch to Take Lead.

By Walter Haight,
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

CHARLES TOWN, July 3. Favorites won the first and last races here today and between the two the longshot players made merry. True, there was only one particularly staggering mutuel, that of $32.40 on Sambo G. in the fifth race, but there was a collection of fair rewards for those lucky enough to hold tickets on the other four winners.

The upsets marched right into the feature race, with the winner turning up in Pro Bono, a 5-year-old gelded son of Chicle and Bonus. His ability to win this race was not a secret but just how well he would run for a young apprentice boy named Ollie Cantara was problematical. To make a long story short, Pro Bono did his stuff and Young Cantara did his stuff and the answer was a length and a half victory over Dark Vision, the heavily played favorite. This Play was third, if such matters.

Jockey Uses His Head.

In fact, Young Cantara not only put up a good exhibition of riding on Pro Bono but he actually showed signs of having done some thinking along the route. Thinking is something that appears to have been left out of the jockey's code. The majority of so-called riders hereabouts are about as useful to a horse as one of those monkey firemen at the circus.

Put most of our young riders on a horse that breaks last in his field and the boy will do one of two things. He may be content to pull in towadr the rail and be last in a game of follow-the-leader for the remainder of the route. Then, again, he may go to the whip, rush the tongue off his mount, getting to a contending position, and then force him every inch of the way. The chartmaker's note says "So-and-So tired in the stretch."

Cantara did the right thing today. When Pro Bono slouched away from the barrier like a sports-writer on his day off, Cantara let him find his stride, hustled him just enough to be in the race and then let Dark Vision, Worthington, Modern Times and This Play battle it out for the doubtful honor of setting the pace. Cantara bided his time and waited. When the real test came on the swing for the stretch, he let out a few notches and Pro Bono had enough left to bound to the front. It was all over but the shouting from that point to the wire. Dark Vision managed to stagger into second money ahead of This Play.

Pro Bono paid a $16.80 mutuel.

Those who go in for the daily double were rewarded with a pay-off of $69.40 on the combination of Hurdy Gurdy in the first, and Scotch Age in the third.

In Separate Pool.

"Mr. A Constant Reader" (I knew I had a public) writes in to ask just how the daily double is figured. He says he has tried all sorts of combinations on the mutuel prices and can't arrive at the same figures as that given out by the track.

The daily double is a combination bet on the first and third races. It is entirely independent of the mutuel pools on the first and third races. It is a separate pool and aside from the fact that two horses are named by the better, it works as one race. The money played in the double pool alone determines the amount of the pay-off. The fact taht the double pool is independent often leads to a wide variation from the individual mueuel on the two horses involved. As a rule the double pays better than a parlay of the two horses made independently. However, several times during the mteting, the double has actually lost money for the player who might have engineered his own parlay.

Dear Al: Charles Town, July 3.

My friend, Frank, says its a wonder the Shenandoah Jockey Club wouldn't run fourteen races today, starting, at say, sunrise and give all the customers a free lunch at noon. The program for the holiday is nine races, starting at 2:30 o'clock. That gives Bennings, Inc., nine chances to be wrong and nine chances to be right. Clocker Mike gave me the horse laugh today whe Sambo G. came romping home at a $32.40 mutuel. As you recall, he begged me to put that one on top at picking time last night. I managed to wiggle home a pair of winning favorites in Hurdy Gurdy and Luke Connell. Old Royal Charge bit the dust today. He bled during the running of the final race and was destroyed. Unsound for a long time, Royal Charge has been doing his best to earn his way. I'm recommending horse heaven for him and blinkers for Mike.

BILL.

First race—Disruption, after a night's sleep, may come back to take care of this field. He ran a fair race today to be third. Speedemup is a possiblity. Scotty Pride for the show.

Second race—Mint Bud gets in breaks off the rail. May be a hard this with only 105 pounds and horse to be with this assignment. The consistent Consummation and the inconsistent Grand Rox for the other awards.

Third race—Sambo G hardly runs two races alike, but if he is sent back following that victory today, I'm inclined to follow Clocker Mike and play him on the nose. Bonnie Laddie and Palm Broom for the rest.

Fourth race—Dixie Bee has a way of staggering home in front of these horses. May do it again tomorrow. Nay Nay, always a threat, shapes up as a dangerous contender. Tody West has been groomed in the dawn and may surprise.

Fifth race—Golden Vein appears to be the clas sof this field. He whipped practically the same bunch last Saturday. Rollick and Aldershot are at tops and will be ready to fight it out for the main end of the purse if Golden Vein makes mistakes.

Sixth race—Scotty Don goes for the Benning dough here. He has been raced into excellent shape and can beat Dark Vision, I do believe. Crossing Over for the rest.

Seventh race—Worthington may be the wake-up horse in this race. He was given an easy sprint today which may have been the warm-up. The Gen is another that may surprise. Wandrel's recent win was rather lucky.

Eighth race—Miss Catalan has proved her right to the placed ahead of this kind of horsefesh. Sand Bell, according to Clocker Mike, is one that may do a little upsetting. Voco for the show.

Ninth race—No Mistake has been away from the winner's circle for sometime. This one needs a price and will have it tomorrow. Hosain and Rozell for the place and show.

DAY PAST, away in the first flight, assumed command on the back stretch, drew out, but was hard urged to the finish. HASTY QUEEN, always a forward factor, held on well. MY SCOTCH, sluggish in finding her best speed, closed with a rush and was going fastest of all at the finish.

SCOTCH AGE, well up from the start, wore SUPREME MISS down on the final turn, drew out in the stretch, but had to be hard urged to the finish. JANE PORTER, checked early speed, moved up on final turn and closed gamely. THREE GRAND, a forward factor from the start, hung on well.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:55. Winner, F. Preece's br. g. (5), by Chicle—Bonus. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:28.

PRO BONO, away slowly, was reserved from the pace of the leaders until leaving the back stretch, moved up stoutly on the outside, wore DARK VISION down and was going away at the end. DARK VISION had good early speed to take command in the run for the first turn, was steadied along in front, but could not withstand winner's challenge. THIS PLAY, slow to find her best speed, moved up quickly and closed well.

FIFTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $250, claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:17. Winner, Mrs. G. C. Everhart's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAMBO G., $32.40, $11.60, $3.40; KING BIRD, $4.20, $3.20; PINK POST, $2.80.

SAMBO G., going in his best form, was rated behind the leaders and on the outside, wore down PINK POST entering the stretch, but had to be kept under pressure to stall off KING BIRD. Latter, very slow to find his best speed, gradually improved his position and closed well. PINK POST quit badly after showing speed.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:50. Winner, A. Waddell's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAW SCOT, $19.40, $6.80, $4.20; BOSTON IDLE, $17.00, $8.60; THURNBERGIA, $5.80.

BRAW SCOT, far back in the early running, moved up very quickly on the final turn and was up in the final stride. BOSTON IDLE, well up throughout, went to the front when leaving the back stretch, took a good lead and just failed to last. THURNBERGIA had good early speed, was forced to race wide on the back stretch, and was tiring at the end. PERSIAN STAR was messed about considerable, raced wide, and finished on her own courage. LITERATE raced evenly and saved ground. BUCK'S DAISY stumbled going to the first turn and never recovered. RADIAL had good early speed, but stopped badly and appeared to sulk. She was fractious at the post.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:13½. Off at 5:14. Winner, M. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUKE CONNELL, $4.40, $3.00, $3.00; DARK STAR, $4.20, $2.80; NO HOPE, $7.00.

LUKE CONNELL, rated off the early pace, moved into command easily leaving the back stretch, was steadied along in front and won with speed in reserve. DARK STAR, slow as usual in the early racing, moved up stoutly when called on the last turn, but was no match for the winner. NO HOPE had good early speed, drew into command on the back stretch, but tired. CHARLEY J. S., closer up than usual, was forced to race on the outside and flattened out at the finish. The others were outrun. ROYAL CHARGE broke down and was destroyed.

Stocks Decline In Preholiday Light Trading

New York, July 3 (AP).—A preholiday mood, combined with extremely hot weather, accentuated the do-nothing attitude in speculative markets today and stocks stuck in a narrow groove.

A rally in leading commodities failed to evoke a sympathetic response in the stock market, although it helped to steady it somewhat. The main drift of prices was slightly downward.

Chief interest was focused on the favorable reception Wall street gave new corporate bond issues and the appointment of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the new security exchange commission.

Little Bullisch Inspiration.

With steel, automobile and other industries curtailing operations sharply over Fourth of July, markets found little bullish inspiration in the trade news.

Trading dragged with a heavy step throughout the day. Transfers on the stock exchange were only 401,408 shares compared with 411,730 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co., average for 90 stocks was only three-tenths of a point lower at 76.7.

Silvers Make Little Headway.

Silver shares made a little headway against the inertia of the market. U. S. Smelting & Refining gained 3 points and American Smelting, Howe Sound and Cerro de Pasco sold fractionally to a point higher. The price of bar silver in New York was marked up one-eight of a cent an ounce to 46⅝, within one-eight of its 1934 peak.

Rail shares stiffened and recovered part of yesterday's losses. The first batch of railroad carloading reports for last week showed sizeable gains in freight movement, pointing to a new 1934 peak in carloadings for that period. Heavy grain movement in the Middle West was the biggest contributing factor to loadings.

The market was a narrow affair and turnover in most ordinarily active issues was restricted to a few hundred shares.

Foreign Markets

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading was inactive and the tendency was generally weaker on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities and home rails were dull, while German bonds receded further. Mining shares were reactionary and transatlantic issues and leading industrials were weaker. The closing was dull.

Paris—Quotations on the bourse were heavy on the rumor that the government will float a ten-year 4½ per cent treasury bond issue at 930 francs. Events in Germany added to the pessimism of traders. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Selling continued to prevail although there were a few buying orders despite the fact that prices ranged a few points. The market closed with fractional recoveries.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Analysis of Individual Budget Items Makes It Clear the Present Fiscal Showing Is Not the Result of Deliberate Economy.

By Ralph West Robey.

If one approaches the record of the last fiscal year solely from the point of view of what it was planned to spend even as late as six months ago, it may appear the the Administration has been following a policy of economy. A little analysis of the more detailed figures, however, quickly shows that this is far from the case. Expenditures have been far less than was estimated in the budget message of the President last January, but the difference has been the result of an inability to get the money out, not the result of a lack of willingness. Study of the various items makes this clear.

First, however, it is well to recall the total figures. In January it was estimated that total expenditures for the fiscal year—up through last Saturday—would amount to $9,900,000,000. Actually they were $7,100,000,000—a difference of $2,800,000,000. It is this latter amount—$2,800,000,000—that it is interesting to allocate to the various departments and special agencies of the Government.

RFC Alone Accounts For 84 Per Cent of Total.

Topping the list on the basis of the amount by which actual expenditures fell below the estimate comes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The budgetary estimate was $3,970,000,000. It actually used only $1,615,000,000, or $2,355,000,000 less than expected. Here, then, is by all odds the largest amount of the total difference. In fact, it accounts for 84 per cent of the total.

Next comes the Public Works Administration. It had an allotment in budget of $675,000,000; it actually spent only $156,000,000. This is a difference of $519,000,000 or 18 per cent of the total amount by which outlay dropped below estimates.

Next comes the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The estimated expenditures of this organization were $555,000,000; the actual expenditures, $289,000,000, a difference of $266,000,000. This is approximately 10 per cent of the total by which expenditures fell below budgetary expectations.

Next comes the regular departments of the Government taken as a whole. The estimate for them was $1,757,000,000. Their actual expenditures were $1,498,000,000. This is a difference of $259,000,000. Of this the greatest "savings" were: War Department, $121,000,000; Agriculture Department, $55,000,000, and Navy Department, $30,000,000. The total for all the departments amounted to 9 per cent of the $2,800,000,000.

Except for Direct Relief Other Items Insignificant

For convenience all of the other items with the exception of CWA and FERA may be grouped together. The total budget estimate for them was $2,534,000,000; the total outlay, $2,497,000,000—an insignificant difference.

On the side of "savings," then, the record has been: Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $2,355,000,000, or 84 per cent; Public Works Administration, $519,000,000, or 18 per cent; Agricultural Adjustment Administration, $266,000,000, or 10 per cent; and the regular departments, $259,000,000, or 9 per cent. This gives a total of $3,399,000,000, or 121 per cent of the $2,800,000,000 by which expenditures fell below budgetary estimates.

The offsetting item was the CWA and the FERA. The estimate made in the budget speech for this last January was $400,000,000. It will be recalled, too, that it was insisted that this was the maximum that would be spent for such relief. Actual expenditures, however, were $1,050,000,000, or over 2½ times the estimate.

It is this item that indicates that our present budget showing is as good as it is simply because of the inability of the Administration to get the money out. In the case of these organizations, in which the money merely was given away, there was no hesitancy on the part of people to take it, and consequently they pumped out far more than planned. In the other items, where the recipient assumed an obligation of repayment, try as it did, it simply could not get the money out.

Bond Market Eases Fraction In Small Sale

Prime Loans Hold Firm; Germans Rally; Trading, $9,335,000.

New York, July 3 (AP).—Firmness of prime corporate issues and a brisk rally in the recent depressed German list helped to keep the bond market in motion today, although trading generally was diffident and prices in some of the secondary groups mildly mixed.

The volume of transactions dropped to $9,335,000, par value, against $11,740,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased one-tenth of a point to 86.2.

The high-grade bond departments were further encouraged by the reception given the offering of Pennsylvania Railroad general mortgage 4¼s. The oversubscription of this issue, which will refund a maturity of a higher rate, was generally taken for granted.

Moderate improvement was shown by some loans of American Telephone, American Waterworks, Santa Fe, Burlington, Chile Copper, Cincinnati Gas, Cleveland Union Terminal, Colorado Fuel, Denver & Rio Grande, Kansas Gas, Midvale Steel, National Dairy, Pacific Public Service, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Union Pacific and Warner Bros.

Declines of fractions to around a point were suffered by some issues of Western Pacific, United Drug, Southern Railway, Northern Pacific, McKesson, Illinois Central, Great Northern, Hudson & Manhattan, Chicago & Northwestern, St. Paul, American Smelting, American Rolling Mill and Alleghany Corporation.

The majority of United States Government securities held gains ranging from 1-32 to 7-32 of a point, but dealings here were not particularly lively.

German International 7s and 5½s recovered 1 and 2½ points, respectively, as the situation in the Reich appeared to be somewhat improved. Elsewhere in the foreign section transactions were light and prices irregular.

Curb's Prices Change Little In Dull Session

Few Specialties Improve as Trading Dwindles to 102,000 Shares.

New York, July 3 (AP).—A few specialties improved in today's dull curb trading but the general list finished with narrow changes. Oil, utilities and metals ended fairly even.

Aluminum Co. of America was steady after having dipped sharply yesterday, while General Tire & Rubber tumbled some 4 points in a light selling flurry. Humble Oil eased, but Standard Oil of Indiana and Gulf ruled about unchanged. Electric Bond & Share gained a shade.

In the miscellaneous list net advances of major fractions to a point or so were recorded by Ferro Enamel, Sherwin-Williams, Axton Fisher, Armour preferred (new), Canadian Industrial Alcohol B, Glen Alden Coal and Greyhound Corporation.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The dollar was irregular against foreign currencies today. In London the dollar lost 1⅛ cents from Monday, closing at 5.05¾ to the pound. The latter continued to rise in New York, gaining ⅝ cent at $5.06.

The dollar held steady in Paris, closing unchanged at the equivalent of 6.59½ cents to the franc. The French unit lost ⅛ cent in New York at 6.59½ cents.

The price of gold in London moved 2½ pence lower to 137 shillings 7½ pence (equivalent to $34.77). An amount valued at $1,852,500 was purchased.

Goods Markets.

New York, July 3 (A.P.).—Cotton goods held steady with trading quiet today. Preholiday interest was greater than usual owing to the many retail buyers who were looking around for hot weather necessities in the way of sheer dresses, swim suits, sportswear, towels, &c. Rayon manufacturers have opened books for August orders and business has begun to come forward well. More interest developed in men's wear. Silks were quiet. Interest in burlaps centered around reports of stocks at Calcutta, and the preliminary report on July acreage planted, figures on which were due later today. The Government has called for bids for cotton ticking to be distributed through relief agencies as coverings for mattresses.

Wool Market.

Boston, July 3 (A.P.). (U. S. Dept. Agr.). Very little business was closed in the Boston wool market. Some manufacturers were in the market looking over the new wools, but they did not buy any more than occasional sample lots. Quotations on spot grease combing domestic wools were mostly unchanged from the close of last week. Woolen manufacturers bought a little wool suitable for their purposes at steady to firm prices.

Domestic Business Conditions

Business statistics appearing during the past week revealed mixed trends, the most important change being the sharp drop in activity in the steel industry.

The decline in the scheduled rate of steel operations, which amounted to approximately 20 per cent, was widely anticipated as operations had been maintained at a relatively high level in recent weeks due to the price situation.

Automobile production for the week of June 23 was approximately the same as in the preceding week, and current indications point to a June output of close to 300,000 units, compared with 332,000 units in May.

Electric power output was the highest for any week this year, and was 4.8 per cent higher than a year ago.

The Pacific Coast area showed the largest relative increase over 1933, while production in the New England and Rocky Mountain regions was again lower than last year.

Freight carloadings rose slightly in the week of June 16.

The composite business index for the second week of June advanced fractionally. This is the first time that an increase has been recorded since April.

Construction contracts awarded during the first half of June were slightly lower than in May, on a daily average basis.

Residential contracts awarded increased, but there was a drop in nonresidential awards and a further reduction in public works and public utility work placed under contract.

Dividend Changes in June

New York, July 3.—Favorable dividend changes in June totaling 138 were more than 50 per cent above the May figures, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. Detailed figures comparing June and May, 1934; June, 1933, and the first six months of 1934 and 1933 follow:

Comptroller Issues Call for Banks' Status

First Time FDIC Has Taken Such Action; Statements for June 30.

(Associated Press.)

Calls for June 30 bank condition statements were made simultaneously yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. It was the first time the FDIC had taken such action.

The comptroller's call went to National banks, the Federal Reserve's to member banks, State and National, and the deposit insurance corporation's to its membership, which includes institutions not subject to either of the other calls.

The information that must be supplied to the FDIC, however, is virtually the same as that required on the other two calls. Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, said directors of that organization were impelled by a desire to obtain more accurate information regarding the condition of insured banks not subject to other Federal examinations.

He made it clear the data was not being sought for the purpose of making additional assessments at this time, and said no further levies for insurance purposes were to be made prior to October 1.

"It is not the intention of the corporation," Crowley said, "to burden banks with requests for data, reports or other information, or to issue calls except when absolutely necessary under the provisions of the banking act of 1933."

The FDIC call will bring together information on the condition of 7,567 State banks not affiliated with the Federal Reserve, which has never been available before. Most of the licensed banks of the country are members of the insurance fund.

Officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Coroporation said that member banks, other than National institutions under the authority of the Comptroller of the Currency, would not be required to publish condition statements except where such is provided by State law. Information required by the FDIC will be forwarded to it on a special form.

948 Banks Opened In First Half of '34

125 Institutions Granted Permits in Month of June.

New York, July 3.—During the month of June, 125 more banks opened throughout the United States the American Banker reports, bringing the total of bank openings for the first half of 1934 to 948, of which 327 were under National charter and 621 under State supervision.

The reopenings licensed and replacement institutions chartered since the first of the year by months have been as follows:

Month	Natl.	State	Tot.
January	69	117	186
February	63	70	133
March	48	111	159
April	53	155	208
May	40	97	137
June	54	71	125
Total	327	621	948

Openings last week amounted to 29, with 6 National and 23 State banks making up this total.

The number of banks operating on a 100% unrestricted basis at the 1934 midyear totaled 15,537, the American Banker estimates, as compared with 13,781 on March 29, 1933 and 18,390 on December 31, 1932, just before the banking holiday last year. Five years ago, on June 30, 1929, there were 25,110 banks in the United States.

New Brazilian Tariff.

The new Brazilian tariff which was published on June 11, 1934, will become effective on September 11, 1934, according to a cable dated June 35 from Ambassador Hugh Gibson, Rio de Janeiro. At the time the tariff was published it was announced that it would be effective the next day, for merchandise embarked on and after June 12, 1934. However, it has been decided to grant a 90-day period before it comes into force, as had been implied during the tariff revision.

Cotton Prices Recover Under Buying Drive

July Closes at 12.07 as General Market Rises 17 to 19 Points.

New York, July 3 (AP).—Cotton recovered today about half of Monday's losses on covering or rebuying based on the weather news from the Southwest.

October contracts sold up to 12.31 or 20 points above yesterday's closing quotations, and ended the day at 12.28, with the general market ending steady at net advances of 17 to 19 points.

Initial prices were 5 to 8 points higher in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables. The gains widened on the failure of the weather news to indicate more important rains in the Southwest, the steadiness of wheat and the absence of any important selling pressure.

July advanced to 12.05 and December to 12.46 with active months generally showing net gains of 15 to 22 points during the early afternoon.

Realizing was encountered at these figures and while trading remained quiet, prices reacted a few points in the late trading under preholiday realizing or liquidation. Closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points of the best on active months.

A private report placed the condition of the crop at 66.8 per cent of normal and the indicated yield at 9,843,000 bales.

Exports today 17,357 making 7,396,625 so far this season. Port receipts 15,415. United States port stocks 2,544,061.

Silver Buying May Increase Bank Reserves

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, July 3 (AP).—The immediate effect of the Treasury's "enthusiastically" pursued silver purchase program, in the opinion of Wall street banking authorities, will probably be a further expansion of excess bank reserves.

Barring some unexpected offsetting development, this should tend to keep money rates at their present extremely low levels, and to bolster high-grade bonds, already at the highest prices since 1928.

This is just the reverse of what was feared when more inflationary silver schemes were under consideration. Then, Wall street felt there might be a repetition of the flight of capital out of bonds and other fixed income investments into equities and commodities.

The silver buying program will tend to increase bank reserves, it is explained, because as the Treasury issues currency against its silver holdings, this currency will make its way to the banks as deposits, and the banks will presumably turn it into the Federal Reserve banks, where it will expand still further their excess reserves.

The excess reserve balances which the member banks have on hand at the Federal institutions are already over $1,700,000,000, and since they earn no interest, constant pressure is being exerted upon bankers to make investments and loans to increase the banks' earnings.

If carrying out the silver purchase acts requires the buying of some 1,300,000,000 ounces of white metal, and if the Treasury gets it at an average of 75 cents an ounce, in keeping with recent estimates, then the Treasury would presumably issue about $1,000,000,000 in silver certificates.

At the Treasury it has been stated that only as much currency would be issued against the new silver as the silver cost. If at a later time the Treasury decided to value all its silver at the old legal rate of $1.29 an ounce for the purposes of issuing currency, it could increase the $1,000,000,000 in new silver certificate money to approximately $1,700,000,000.

These silver certificates would tend to increase bank reserves in a manner somewhat similar to the Treasury's issuance of gold certificates to the Federal Reserve banks as it has "spent" part of the profit of gold devaluation. The Treasury has established credits with the Reserve banks by depositing certificates against its gold.

It has been drawn against these credits to pay its bills, and as it paid its bills the money came back to the banks in the form of deposits by Government employes, contractors and others who were paid. Unable to get this money out again in the form of loans and investments as fast as it came in, the banks found their excess reserves growing.

Harrisonburg's Lead in League Threatened

Twin Bills Today to Play Big Part in Standing of Teams.

Valley League Standing.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Harrisonburg	7	3	.700
Charlottesville	5	3	.625
Culpeper	4	3	.571
Woodstock	4	5	.286
New Market	2	6	.250

HARRISONBURG, July 3 (Spl.).—Harrisonburg emerged to the top of the Valley League over the week-end, defeating New Market, which was the club that handed Charlottesville, the leaders all season, their third straight setback.

The champions, registering their fourth straight victory, hold a scant lead over the University City lads, but the fans predict that the situation may be changed by the Fourth of July double-headers. Culpeper, which does not figure in the holiday games, is only one game behind Charlottesville.

Both Woodstock and New Market play double-headers against Charlottesville and Harrisonburg on Wednesday, and the two leading clubs have the advantage of playing on their home fields. The schedule was so arranged in order to draw the biggest crowds. The gate receipts are divided among the four clubs.

Player List Closes Saturday.

From no won each club will know what to face, as Saturday midnight was the deadline for the players' lists. Each club is limited to 15 players. There will be no more of importing pitchers or other stars for special games.

New Market, with its revamped line-up, which included seven new faces—from Alexandria and West Virginia—got off to a good start Saturday by defeating Charlottesville, 3 to 2, in 10 innings, but ran into a snag Sunday on its home grounds when Harrisonburg pounded out an 8-to-2 victory. New Market conquered Titcombe, Alexandria High School ace, hurling for Charlottesville, but was limited to three hits by Southpaw Johnny Keister, of Harrisonburg. The champions touched Munden, a newcomer, for nine safeties, which were effectively coupled with seven New Market errors.

Culpeper was idle over the week-end, being rained out at Woodstock Saturday. In its last performance, Culpeper shut out Woodstock, 4 to 0, with Walter Beall hurling in big league fashion. Woodstock has added several Front Royal players which may strengthen the club in coming games.

Two "For the Book" Plays.

Two "for the book" were staged during the week. Lefty Keister walked four men in the first inning against New Market Sunday, but was not scored upon. One of those passed was caught when he attempted to advance on a passed ball with one out. With the bases loaded, Keister retired the side.

In an exhibition game against Staunton, of the Augusta League, Harrisonburg pulled a triple play to halt a first inning rally. There were runners on second and first when Manager Dey, of Staunton, lined to Keister, then playing first. The rest way easy. This game, incidentally, was rattled off in 1 hour 25 minutes. Harrisonburg shoved over the winning tally in the ninth.

Cubs Purchase Catcher.

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—Catcher Walter Stephenson, of the Lafayette, La., club of the Evangeline League, has been purchased by the Chicago Cubs, it was announced today.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The Boston team of the National League has twice demonstrated that a good way not to judge a baseball team is by its standing on July 4. Although the team on top July 4 usually wins the pennant in October, the Nationals in 1883 and again in 1914 turned out to be notable exceptions.

In each case the team was the lowest in the league—but at the close of the season they were champions.

The team of 1883 came to the top in a long series of victories after starting disastrously, and as there was no regular world series in those days, they were champions in their own right. In 1914, again Boston came from last place to win the league pennant—and to prove conclusively their right to the title, "The Miracle Team," they upset the dope again by winning the world series in four straight games from the Athletics, a team which was supposed to be unbeatable.

Outstanding hero of the series was Catcher Hank Gowdy, who caught all four games, and who won the first with a center-field home run which broke up an extra-inning tie. Dick Rudolph and Bill James divided pitching honors.

Culpeper Show Under Way Today

300 Horses Are Entered; Record Attendance Is Expected.

CULPEPER, Va., July 3 (Spl.).—With the stables on the grounds literally bulging with fine throughbreds, and the streets of the town alive with holiday visitors, everything is in readiness for the thirtieth annual exhibition of the Culpeper Horse Show and Racing Association, which will get under way at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the horse show grounds here.

It is confidently expected that the opening day will have a record attendance.

Entries for the show ring have reached the 300 mark.

Sixty racers are already on the grounds for the five running races, four flat and one steeplechase, each day, including some of the best-known race horses in this section.

Mrs. Ingalls Arrives.

Mrs. Fay Ingalls, of Hot Springs, arrived today with her entries, Jumping Jack and Silver Fox; Mrs. Allen Potts, one of the best known horsewomen in Virginia, brought Nesbit and Claws to compete for ring honors. Cathode Ray and Sportman, from Miss Elizabeth Nesbit's Stable in Warrenton, are in usual good form, also Broken Glass (Mrs. D. N. Lee) who has captured first honors at State and National shows.

Recalling horse shows of former years, a silver cup is being displayed with trophies offered in this year's classes, that was awarded in 1858 by the Upperville Union Club, to Samuel T. Ashby, and is in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Mattie Ashby Birney, widow of Gen. William Birney. Two years later, Mr. Ashby was again a winner, and his wife was also awarded a silver cup in a contest for serving the best supper. The latter cup is a prized possession of another daughter, Mrs. Blanche Ashby Lambert, of Washington. The Upperville Union Club was the origin of the Upperville Horse and Colt Show, said to be the first organization of its kind in America.

Woodmen vs. Postal.

Woodmen of the World baseball team will play Postal Telegraph today on diamond No. 4 at 3 o'clock. All players are requested to report at the diamond at 2:30 o'clock.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Bully Calf Makes Blackie Laugh

You know that Jay Bird left Mr. Man's house yesterday to go back to Mountain House and Blackie. It was pretty dark when he got there, and the folks were just going in to supper. They were all mighty glad to see him, and Bettie told them to wait a few minutes till she fixed a place for Jay Bird and popped him some corn. She could hardly cook anything else that he liked as well as popcorn, and she always liked to please him.

When they were all seated at the table, Blackie said: "Well, Jay Bird, I know you had a good time down on the creek, and I want you to tell us all about it. What was Uncle Joe doing?"

Jay Bird nearly choked on some popcorn when Blackie asked him that, for he just had to laugh. And he knew that Blackie would choke worse when he told him what Who-Who Owl saw Uncle Joe doing. But he had to tell, and he did.

When he told him how that black calf had butted Uncle Joe into the fig tree, and how Uncle Joe had pulled himself out and ran for his house, Blackie had his own spell of choking. It was a sight to see him lie back in his big chair and laugh.

Poor Uncle Joe going out to get a bearskin off of a little black calf, and not geting anything except a bad butting into a fig tree! Poor Uncle Joe, who had been working all the summer to make good things for Blackie and his friends to eat, and then to have his own calf butt him into a fig tree and scare him 'most to death! Blackie said it was sort of a pity, but it was awfully funny, too, and he had just had to laugh.

And Jay Bird told them what Uncle Joe had told Mr. Man about being too busy with his crops to do any more hunting for Blackie. But he also told them how glad Uncle Joe was that Aunt Judy gave him the good excuse to let Blackie alone.

"Well, I would like to pat that black calf on the back," said Blackie, "and I want to say right now that I hope none of you will ever do anything to hurt him. He has helped us to get some fun out of Uncle Joe, and so he is our friend from now on. I only wish I could get a good look at him."

"And I want to tell you that he is a friend of mine," said Billie Possum. "Just think what a good time Uncle Joe would have had gnawing Billie's bones if that calf hadn't knocked the bucket off of that barrel."

Blackie asked Jay Bird all about how things were around his creek house, and if he saw any turkeys and geese and ducks. Jay Bird told him that he saw them all, and that he saw lots of bees filling three hollow trees full of honey.

"And there is a whole row of new bee-gums over at Aunt Lindy's house," said Jay Bird.

"Yes," said Blackie, "and there is a whole row of black cats over there, too, or there was that day when Rover Dog went hunting for eggs; and so I guess that row of bee-gums will have to stay there as long as the cats stay."

And now the sandman had hit Benny and Jenny in the eyes, and Betty had to take them off to bed.

A. A. U. Denies Charges of "Politics"

Coast Coach Says Inner Clique Picks Athletes to Be Sent Abroad.

CHICAGO, July 3 (AP).—Charges that politics entered into the selection of American athletes who are to compete abroad this summer were vigorously denied tonight by Avery Brundage, president of the National A. A. U., in replying to the attack made by Charles Hunter, coach of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, which won the junior A. A. U. championship in Milwaukee last Friday night and finished second in the senior title event.

Hunter had characterized the selections as "politics," charging that an inner clique had chosen the teams without consulting the committee set up for that purpose. In addition, he criticized the officiating in the National meet.

President Brundage declared that Hunter himself attended the meeting at which the selections were made and that the session was open.

Denies Politics Charge.

"The charges that politics entered into the choice of the athletes who are being sent abroad this summer by the Amateur Athletic Union are entirely without foundation," President Brundage said.

"The three teams were selected by the track and field committee of the A. A. U. in a regularly convened open meeting attended by over a score of members from all over the United States, including Charles Hunter and others from the Olympic Club. The first action of the committee was to confirm the practice of selecting the men according to their performances in the championships. A comparison of the list of the men selected with the winners in the meet will show that this policy was followed to the letter. Furthermore, every individual selection was discussed at length and each one was approved unanimously.

"The by-laws of the A. A. U. provide that the committee on foreign relations shall have jurisdiction over the competition of foreign athletes in the United States and United States athletes abroad. The track and field committee selected the teams, but the foreign relations committee has charge of the teams and selected the manager-coaches.

Defends Officiating.

"So far as the conduct of the meeting is concerned, the fact that four world and nine meet records were broken should speak for itself. Three men broke the existing world's record in the shot put, two jumpers exceeded the world's record in the high jump, and the best broad jump of the season (25 feet 7 8-19 inches) was made in the meet. One can not put the shot over 55 feet or high jump over 6 feet 8 inches if the circles or runways are not in good condition.

"The chief inspector and his assistant personally inspected the hurdles after they were placed and reported to the referee that they were correctly located before the race was started

PEGGY, YACHTS, BIG EXPENSIVE ONES, DON'T SINK. THEY CAN'T! IF THEY DO THERE'S ALWAYS LOTS OF LIFE PRESERVERS TO GRAB. BESIDES, I NEVER WAS AFRAID OF WATER ... MUCH.
I WONDER HOW FAR OUT MONTY INTENDS TO SAIL?
BELIEVE ME, IT WOULDN'T BE SO NICE TO BE DUNKED SAY 100 MILES FROM SHORE.
DARLING, THERE ISN'T THE LEAST DANGER OF THAT. NOT THE LEAST. ANOTHER REASON I KNOW WE'LL BE SAFE IS... OH, THAT ENVIOUS WRETCH, OAKDALE.... GETTING ME.. EVERYBODY SO EXCITED ABOUT NOTHING.

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn Understatement By Llanuza

WITH THE FIGHT AGAINST BLITZEN ONLY AN HOUR AWAY, JOE IS MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING—THEN A ROCK, WITH A NOTE FROM JOE ATTACHED TO IT, WAS HURLED THROUGH A WINDOW IN DYNAMITE'S HOME
WHAT'S THA NOTE SAY?
JUST A MINUTE—LEMME READ IT:
Dynamite—I have been kidnapped—The guys that have me say if you don't throw the fight you'll never see me again. Also burn this note and say nothing about it if you want to save me. They mean business. Joe.
WHAT IS IT, DYNAMITE? WHERE'S JOE?
HE'S—HE'S KINDA BEEN DELAYED, PETE—I'M GONNA MEET HIM LATER

THE GUMPS Fisherman's Luck

HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS FOR A CATCH?
I WISH I HAD YOUR LUCK—YOU MUST HAVE BEEN USING FOUR LEAF CLOVERS FOR BAIT—

SURE I'M LUCKY—ALL CHAMPIONS ARE—CAVALCADE IS LUCKY ENOUGH TO RUN FASTER THAN THE OTHER HORSES—BOBBY JONES IS LUCKY ENOUGH TO PLAY BETTER GOLF AND SHAKESPEARE HAD THE LUCK TO WRITE BETTER PLAYS THAN ANYBODY ELSE—
JUST BECAUSE I HAPPEN TO KNOW MORE ABOUT CATCHING FISH THAN OTHER PEOPLE, I'M CALLED LUCKY—NOW I KNOW JUST HOW MAX BAER FEELS WHEN THE FELLOW HE KNOCKS OUT STARTS TO KICK ABOUT HIS LUCK—

THIS KILLING OF MICKEY DUNN AND THE MURDER OF JERRY OMARRA WERE BOTH THE WORK OF STEVE, THE TRAMP AND NO ONE ELSE, CHIEF.
AND WHAT'S BEEN DONE TOWARD LOCATING HIM AND LU? NOTHING!
PAT FOLLOWED UP THAT CHEWING GUM CLEW, AND FOUND THE LOCALITY WHERE OMARRA LIVED—BUT WASN'T ABLE TO PICK UP ANY TRACE OF STEVE AND LARCENY LU.
I'M GOING OUT IN THAT DISTRICT MYSELF THIS AFTERNOON AND LOOK AROUND. MY THEORY IS THAT STEVE AND LU HAVE TAKEN OVER JERRY OMARRA'S AUTO STEALING BUSINESS AND ARE OCCUPYING HIS OLD QUARTERS.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Ingrate.

A hobo came to Jimpson's door, and said he'd like to have a job; he was so weary, sad and sore he was enough to make you sob. This Jimpson is a kindly man, he bade the hobo take a chair, and gave him coffee in a can, and handed him the bill of fare. The stranger filled himself with pies and wholesome doughnuts from the crock, and said next morn he'd surely rise at half past three or four o'clock. Then in the vineyard he would toil, and do as much as workers three, he'd wrestle with the fertile soil, and show how grateful he could be. But at the midnight hour he rose, and sped away as though on wings; he swiped the farmer's Sunday clothes and dollar watch and other things. When strangers go to Jimpson's shack, and ask for work at modest wage, he takes the shotgun from its rack and chases them in bitter rage. At Jimpson's in the days of old the bum could always get the eats, with shelter if the nights were cold, it was a haven for the beats. But one cheap skate of evil heart has spoiled that refuge for his kind; now Jimpson bids the bo depart ere he can tell what's on his mind.
